Riverbank flood threat to be cut by work programme

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

CRUCIAL work to reduce flood risk to people living near the River Dour has started as severe wet weather descends on the district.

From Monday, the Environment Agency will start five weeks of maintenance work to help water flow freely through the river to stop flooding and protect people and properties located nearby.

It marks the beginning of what will become an annual programme of work aimed at reducing flood risk in Dover.

The agency said the River Dour is fed by groundwater and responds quickly to rainfall so there needs to be as few obstructions as possible to allow water to escape quickly.

Maintenance will include clearing areas by the river including buildings, walls and foundations, of vegetation. The size of the man-made islands will be reduced where needed to clear the channel.

Environment Agency operations manager, Ian Nunn, added: "Riverside landowners and other residents can help us to keep flood risk as low as possible by ensuring you dispose of your garden waste responsibly and keep banks clear – anything on them could be carried off by high flows and block the channel, culverts or bridges, causing flooding."

To report any river blockages call 0800 807060.

CLEARING: Overgrowth is to be removed from the River Dour

CRIME

Warning to lock up your lawnmowers, as thieves target sheds

POLICE are warning residents to lock up garden sheds and garages after a spate of attempted burglaries in the River area of Dover.

Break-ins have been reported over the last few months, with the most recent taking place between September 21-24 at a home in Lower Road. The homeowners noticed their garden ornaments, two lions, had been stolen and there were hacksaw marks on the padlock to their van.

It was also found the garage door had been bent in an attempt to prise it open.

Now, police are asking the public to lock up their sheds, garages and outbuildings as autumn approaches and gardening equipment is put away.

River neighbourhood PCSO Janet Claringbould said: "The attempts to break into the van and garage failed, but show the intent that offenders had.

"The ornaments were of sentimental value to the owners. One lion is a large 3ft terracotta, one and the smaller one was painted bright yellow with a red smile. Garden sheds, outbuildings and garages packed with tools, machinery and other valuable equipment offer easy pickings to thieves.

"Take the right precautions to help reduce the risk of having your property stolen, and getting it traced and returned to you if it is taken."

Police say one deterrent to thieves is to security mark your property, making sure it is easier to identify the goods and return them.

Anyone with information on the break-ins can call police on 101.

World record for celeb as custard pie throwing contest hits right spot

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

MAYHEM descended on a normally sleepy rural village last weekend as giant bananas, Elvis impersonators, and even a couple of famous faces, flocked to the World Custard Pie Throwing Championships.

Inspired by the slapstick fun of silent movie legend Charlie Chaplin, the event saw 16 teams of four donning fancy dress costumes and launching pies at each other in a bid to be crowned the throwing champions.

It took place at the Stile Bridge pub in Marden.

Among the competitors were Two Pints of Lager and a Packet of Crisps actor Will Mellor and comedian Rory McGrath who were filming for new Channel 5 show Will, and Rory Champions of the World.

Entrants Pie of the Tiger eventually took the crown, with Tutu Fruity From This Art of Mine coming second.

Also at the contest were the Guinness World Record officials as the showbiz stars tried to break the record for telling 20 jokes in a minute. Mellor managed to secure the record, but McGrath fell short.

The custard pie throwing event was created by former Maidstone mayor Mike FitzGerald in 1967, to raise funds for the village hall.

It soon got a worldwide following, with up to 90 teams taking part from as far afield as Japan and China before it was disbanded.

It was resurrected in 2007, when Mr FitzGerald became mayor once again, and it proved so popular it still continues.

Now, although a much smaller affair, the championships still attract national coverage and organiser Brian Mortimer, a local councillor, is hoping to build on the contest's success in years to come.

Cllr Mortimer said: "The day went very smoothly, we had spectators getting splattered, but they didn't mind and it was absolutely fantastic. Rory is such a character and all the women wanted to see Will."

Despite their name, the custard pies are made from flour and water, as custard "doesn't fly".

Coxheath Scouts got thoroughly covered as they prepared the 1,200 pies needed for the event, which used a massive 200 bags of flour weighing 3lb each.

ACCIDENT

Highways Agency officer is killed on M25 as he helps at crash site

A MAJOR investigation is under way after a Highways Agency traffic officer was killed when he was hit by a car on the M25 on Tuesday.

John Walmsley (pictured) had been attending the scene of an earlier, minor, accident when the tragedy occurred.

The 59-year-old from Gravesend was struck by a Vauxhall Vectra travelling from Kent into Surrey. He was declared dead at the scene.

The incident happened near junction five at Chevening, near Sevenoaks.

His family issued a moving tribute on Thursday: "John Walmsley, our dad, was a great dad, grandad and most importantly great husband, who is irreplaceable.

"He had the affection and respect of just about everyone he came in contact with, due to his honesty and kindness with and to them. He will be greatly missed by his family and all who knew him. XX"

The incident caused huge hold-ups on motorway with a section fully closed to traffic for a short while, and also forced the temporary closure of the M26 as air ambulance teams touched down.

Police were first called to a minor collision at around 1.40pm on the clockwise carriageway of the motorway.

But as they attended the scene, the situation escalated into a major incident when the Highway Agency officer was struck.

A Highways Agency spokesman said: "We are liaising with relevant investigating authorities and as such it would not be appropriate to comment further."

The Vectra was carrying three occupants. Two people were taken to a local hospital; one with injuries believed to be serious and the other with minor injuries.

The incident happened on the M25 prior to where it joins the M26 on the clockwise carriageway.

The road was fully reopened by 10pm.

NEWS IN BRIEF

► Pilot people smuggler

A BELGIAN pilot who attempted to smuggle illegal immigrants into the county has been jailed for three years. Jean Francois Hennaux admitted to helping several groups of migrants get into the UK by flying his light aircraft into Kent airfields. He was caught after he landed unexpectedly at Headcorn aerodrome in June. Two Albanian adults and children disembarked the plane and were prevented from leaving the site by staff. He was sentenced to three years.

► Eurostar disruptions

EUROSTAR services will be disrupted this weekend by "essential" Eurotunnel Engineering works scheduled to take place in the Channel Tunnel. The times for some Eurostar services from Saturday until Monday have been changed, and passengers are being asked to check the special timetable published on Eurostar.com to see if their departure times have changed. Eurostar says it is contacting directly affected passengers.

► Mental health changes

INPATIENT wards in Thanet and Canterbury for older people with mental health problems in east Kent will get £3.5m investment, under plans agreed by NHS Kent and Medway Cluster Board. There will also be more crisis services for living with dementia at home and in care homes, say officials. The public favoured three sites to include Ashford, but clinicians said patients would get a better service if beds were based at two centres.

Sounds bad for Hop Farm Festival as organiser goes into administration

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

IN ITS short life, the Hop Farm Festival established itself as one of the big hitters on the crowded summer scene – but this week its very future hangs in the balance after its promoters prepared to call in the administrators.

It will come as a blow to the local economy – which it was claimed benefited to the tune of millions of pounds by thousands of people descending on the area every year – and to music fans in the county who had grown accustomed to big names performing on their doorstep.

In recent years it has seen the likes of Prince, Morrissey, Lou Reed, The Eagles, Van Morrison and Bob Dylan perform, expanding the two-day event to three days in 2011.

The company behind it is Music Festivals plc. It is run by Vince Power, the man credited with turning around the fortunes of such giants as Glastonbury and Reading during the 1990s before making millions by selling his Mean Fiddler organisation. It suspended its shares last Friday as the scale of its financial woes became apparent.

After launching on the Alternative Investment Market (AIM) last June, at a share price of 66.5p, it valued the company at £10 million. By the time of Friday's announcement, that price had plunged to 2.12p – making the company worth a little over £310,000.

And on Monday it confirmed it was set to appoint an administrator.

In a short statement, it said: "The company announced on August 2 that due to poor trading conditions it expected to generate a material loss for the year ending December 31, 2012, and it was seeking to raise additional working capital.

"The board has in recent weeks pursued a number of different funding proposals, but the company has not been able to procure the necessary funding it requires."

At the heart of its woes lies the Hop Farm Festival, staged in the grounds of the popular tourist attraction in Paddock Wood.

It achieved what few have: establishing itself as a niche event, delivering legendary names aimed at the discerning music fan with that all-important disposable income.

Earlier this summer Music Festivals plc confirmed a big hole blown in its finances by poor ticket sales for the Kent event.

It blamed increased competition from the Olympics, free festivals and the disappointing weather. It also saw a drop in profits at its Spanish event, Benacissim.

MUSICMAN:
Vince Power

POWERED BY THE MUSIC

VINCE Power's reputation in the music industry is unlikely to be hit too hard by the troubles faced by the Hop Farm Festival.

During the 80s he built up his Mean Fiddler empire, starting from a small venue in Harlesden, London, and expanding to include key live venues such as The Forum in Camden and the nearby Jazz Cafe. In 2005, he sold the Mean Fiddler company for a staggering £38 million.

After taking a few years out, he returned with events in Spain and the Hop Farm event in 2008. He always spoke of the Hop Farm being a long-term commitment".

However, not all he touched turned to gold. In 2010, he lost nearly £8m when music promotions and pub business Vince Power Music Group crumpled.

By 2011 things seemed to be back on track; he launched the Feis Festival in London and the Hop Farm grabbed headlines. Buoyed by the positive PR, he floated Music Festivals on AIM. But earlier this summer it was reported he pumped £750,000 into the firm to keep it afloat.

He will almost inevitably return.

Experts in the music industry point towards a squeeze on big ticket spending and increased competition. Others said this year's line-up was lack-lustre at best, and disappointing at worst.

Whatever is at the root of the problem, it would appear the 2013 event hangs by a particularly thin thread.

A spokesman for the festival was keeping tight-lipped this week, but last month was unable to confirm if the 2013 event would go ahead, as we exclusively revealed.

It would appear the financial pressures were in part, at least, the reason two open-air shows at the Hop Farm featuring Leonard Cohen were dramatically pulled and moved into Wembley Arena earlier this month. The reasons were never fully explained, but it was stressed it was not due in any part on the Hop Farm's suitability.

For the Hop Farm itself, managers are waiting to hear about the outcome of the latest drama, but say they remain optimistic the festival could return.

Miguel Fenton, head of communications at the venue, said it was not ruling out the event returning in 2013 for a sixth consecutive year.

He said: "We are aware of the situation, but at this stage, in terms of the

NEWS IN BRIEF

► Man killed on train track

A MAN has died after being struck by a train on the line at Sandling. British Transport Police officers were called to the scene at just after 8am on Thursday, and the incident is not being treated as suspicious. Passengers suffered delays following the incident, with no trains calling at any station between Ashford International and Dover Priory, and services through Canterbury West cancelled or diverted at short notice.

► No 2012 gold for Hornby

MARGATE-based toy and model company Hornby has said it will not make a profit this year, following poor sales of London 2012 merchandise and disruption to production at its Chinese supplier. Following its announcement, its shares fell around 40 per cent to 50p. Lower-than-expected sales of Olympics products meant retailers cancelled repeat orders, so the firm now only expects to break even in the 2012-13 financial year. Last year it made profits of £4.5m.

► OAP saved from blaze

AN elderly man was rescued from a house fire on Monday night. Firefighters wore breathing apparatus to enter the home in Western Avenue, Ashford, and found the lounge area well alight and the elderly man in a first-floor bedroom. Three fire engines and around 15 firefighters tackled the blaze which is believed to have started accidentally from a discarded cigarette. The man suffered serious smoke inhalation.

ART

£3,700 painting bought in golf club is long-lost Turner valued at £20m

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

AN ART enthusiast has hit the jackpot after the painting he bought at an auction has been verified as a Turner original worth a massive £20 million.

Jonathan Weal, 54, from Bromley, bought the oil painting believed to show a coastal scene in Kent, at an auction at the Wealden Golf Club in 2004.

He paid £3,700 for the piece entitled Fishing Boats In A Stiff Breeze, which had a reserve of between just £700-£900.

Now, after years of painstaking research, the work has finally been verified as one of famous artist JMW Turner's (pictured) lost pieces, dating back to 1805 – the same year he painted his famous The Battle of Trafalgar.

Art insurers Hiscox are said to have valued the piece at £20 million.

Turner was renowned for his beautiful landscapes and Mr Weal believes his painting depicts a scene in Kent on the Goodwin Sands, off the coast between Ramsgate and Broadstairs.

He said: "The auction had 1,000 lots and between 200 and 300 of them were paintings.

"I saw it [the Turner picture] on the Saturday, researched it and bought it on the Sunday."

Since then he has spent 3,000 hours proving its authenticity, including using a handwriting expert to analyse the signature and getting seven professors to back up his claims.

He has also walked miles of the coast around Ramsgate in all weathers in a bid to find the exact location which inspired the painting.

Mr Weal said that the pivotal moment for him was when the handwriting was confirmed as Turner's leaving him "absolutely elated".

Mr Weal, who works at an art investment fund, has also discovered the work previously belonged to Turner's best friend, the Reverend Henry Scott Trimmer.

ORIGINAL: Turner's Fishing Boats In A Stiff Breeze is believed to depict a scene off the Kent coast

He said: "What's beautiful is it links Turner to the Kent coast, again."

The discovery comes as another three pieces inspired by views from Kent, but branded as fakes, are now thought to be genuine Turner creations.

The three oil paintings – The Beacon Light, Off Margate and Margate Jetty – were left to the National Museum Wales.

They will now go on display in Cardiff.

For Mr Weal the next stage is to see what people have to say about his painting and this week art specialists gathered at the Dulwich Picture Gallery in London for a conference on the rare piece.

At the moment he is not discussing whether he will sell the work.

'Ticking time bomb' sunken ship sparks debate at meeting on estuary airport plans

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

THE perils of triggering an explosion capable of sending a tsunami along the Thames Estuary with the construction of a proposed multi-billion pound airport were discussed at a public meeting on Thursday night.

The audience met at the St George's Centre at Chatham Maritime to discuss the dangers posed by the wreck of American military ship the SS Richard Montgomery.

It lies off the coast of Sheppey, close to the Medway Approach Channel, where she sank in 1944.

Her masts can still be seen.

Almost 1,400 tonnes of explosive are still aboard the vessel, and experts insist the concept of an estuary airport can't even be considered until the explosives within the ship are made safe.

It is claimed if the boat was to explode, it would trigger a 4ft tidal wave and smash every window in nearby Sheerness.

This week's meeting was held to explore the dangers the "ticking time bomb" poses to the area, and to discuss the future of the airport project.

Organiser of the event, Ken Rowles, who is making a film about the SS Montgomery for American television, said an estuary airport was out of the question.

Mr Rowles said: "I think it would be very irresponsible

DANGER ZONE: The wreck of the American military ship the SS Richard Montgomery, laden with 1,400 tonnes of explosives, can be clearly seen jutting out off the estuary

6699

If you look at any of the plans the Montgomery will be in the way of runways, and that will be a concern for any kind of plans for an airport in the estuary without doing something about the Montgomery.

"The main danger is anything coming off a plane or, as we've seen in New York, planes missing the runway and hitting the water."

He added that an airport in Kent would be good for business, but said there was "plenty of opportunity" with Manston and other regional airports.

The SS Richard Montgomery is clearly visible above the water line, and contains a number of cluster bombs amongst other munitions.

Documentary-maker Colin Harvey said: "If you look at any of the plans, whether it be the floating airport or any of the other ideas, the Montgomery will be in the way of runways, and that will be a huge concern for people in Sheppey and Southend."

The sunken vessel lies just 1.5 miles off Sheppey and five miles from the Essex town.

If a team was to work in trying to deactivate the explosives, it is believed a 30-mile exclusion zone would have to be applied to the area, and one wrong move could lead to huge levels of destruction.

Experts are angry nothing has been done about the ailing vessel, with increased worries about the stability of decks on the vessel which are holding up a large number of explosives.

Mr Harvey added: "Over the years it was considered the best thing to do, but the original experts who went before Parliament in the 1940s said leaving it along was not an option.

"The best plan is to remove it. Sure, it's pricey, but what's the price of life?"

Scientist and explosives expert Mike Barker, despite supporting the idea of an estuary airport, admitted building work could not be carried out until the explosives were cleared.

He said: "It's never been as dangerous as it is today. All of the scans provide no information on the condition of the munitions inside the wreck."

Rural elderly on the poverty line are shown how to save thousands of pounds by advice service

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

CITIZENS Advice counsellors say that elderly people in one of the county's most deprived areas desperately need help to tackle debt, benefits, and housing problems.

Thanet has long been known as the poor relation to much of the rest of Kent.

Now the Citizens Advice Bureau (CAB) has compiled a worrying report detailing just how bad things are in the coastal region – and it's the isle's older residents most at risk.

The CAB said there is a worrying level of deprivation among isolated older people in rural areas of east Kent, and more advice provision for older people was vital.

In just two years, more than 1,500 older people have sought help from Thanet Citizens Advice's Rural East Kent 50 Plus Advice Service.

As more and more face threat of tumbling beneath the poverty line, the housing and finance advice service dedicated to the over 50s living in small towns and villages, found massive demand, and said it was only able to scratch the surface of the dire problems they face.

A shocking two-fifths were not getting welfare benefits they were entitled to, but many were now getting £2,700 a year more with CAB help.

The Rural East Kent 50 Plus Advice Service was also able to switch fuel tariffs for many, saving a similar £2,700.

And after getting more support, 72 per cent of older people felt their confidence had improved in dealing with money matters.

But the service is run by just four part-time benefits and debt advisers, and one part-time housing adviser.

It provides advice on debts including rent and mortgage payment problems; bank loans and overdrafts; fuel poverty and energy bills; water and utility bills; and council tax bills.

However, staff believe they are not reaching enough of those who need help.

Janice Dadds, project co-ordinator for the service, said: "It's easy to imagine Kent's small towns and villages are home to prosperous older people who have comfortable properties and surplus money to allow them to enjoy later life.

"However, the high demand for support from this service in tackling debts, housing issues, and making claims for welfare benefits demonstrates the poverty many older people are enduring.

"The challenge is to ensure older people living in rural isolation have much easier access to advice about benefits, debt and housing.

"The consequences of not providing support are very real threats of homelessness, living in cold houses, excessive and unmanageable debts, and legal action against vulnerable older people."

The report concludes the service will have helped 3,000 by next March, when it is due to end.

It says: "This is a need which will continue to increase as the older population in Kent becomes much larger. The anticipated increase in the Kent population in the age group of over 50s is set to rise from 36 per cent in 2007, to 44 per cent by 2026."

"In addition, the challenging economic climate and the Government's welfare reforms are likely to impact negatively upon the living standards of many older people living in rural east Kent who will, in greater numbers, begin to seek advice about benefits, debt and housing matters."

The report stresses older people must be made more aware of the services and support available, and shown how to save fuel costs.

Who Do You Trust When Buying A Car?

"The sales person was very helpful, attentive and went out of his way to help me find the right car."

"This is the third car I have bought from them; the whole experience of buying my Fiesta has been enjoyable. Our sales person couldn't have been any more helpful."

"Great experience, all the staff were very helpful and professional."

"In all the years that I've bought vehicles the sales person that dealt with me was the most polite, professional, helpful car sales guy I've ever done business with – he's a credit to Haynes."

"The sales person should be commended for his overall professionalism, politeness and the fact that he actually seemed to care on a personal level."

"My overall experience of buying from Haynes was excellent. My husband was also impressed and has already decided he will go to Haynes when he changes his car."

"The dealer was great, helpful and understanding, made me feel like I was talking to a friend."

"Made me feel welcome. They were friendly, helpful and it was excellent customer service."

"The sales person answered all of my queries throughout the process with complete honesty and integrity."

"I have always been treated with respect at Haynes but the sales person took things up a notch and made it a most enjoyable and satisfying experience."

"I have dealt with Haynes for over 20 years and if I was wanting a Ford there is only one place for me to go – Haynes of Maidstone."

"I have bought numerous vehicles from Haynes and find that their customer approach is excellent and always feel welcome. I definitely would not go to any other Ford dealership to purchase a new car."

"I felt my needs were listened to carefully at every stage of the proceedings. I cannot praise the sales person highly enough."

"Haynes must be doing something right as this is my 5th car from Haynes. I was greeted in the showroom like I was a very good friend."

"It's a real pleasure dealing with any member or department at Haynes."

"Experience was extremely personalised and my lifestyle needs were always paramount."

"There was nothing that could have been done better. The dealership was excellent."

"Everyone I dealt with at Haynes was wonderful. They made a sale when there wasn't originally one there to make and then their customer service was outstanding. I have already recommended them to a couple of friends and will continue to do so."

Ukip unveils 'giant-killer' candidate in its bid to land crime commissioner job

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

THE UK Independence Party has unveiled its candidate in the race to be the county's most powerful figure in the fight against crime.

Piers Wauchope made national headlines when he defeated Tunbridge Wells Borough Council's Conservative leader Bob Atwood in the May local elections.

It proved to be one of Ukip's most memorable ballot box victories, toppling a popular local figure and leader of the traditionally true blue Tory stronghold.

Now Cllr Wauchope has been unveiled as the party's candidate for the November elections.

And the chances are he will know just how to appeal to uncertain Tory voters; just as he did when springing a surprise in the Rusthall ward. For eight years he was a Conservative councillor in Camden, and stood in the 2005 General Election as a Tory for the Hampstead and Highgate seat. He narrowed the gap but still lost out to Labour's Glenda Jackson.

POPULAR: Piers Wauchope toppled the Tunbridge Wells Tory leader

He will go head-to-head with the likes of Tory Craig Mackinlay and Labour's Harriet Yeo, in addition to independent candidates such as Ann Barnes.

The Kent Police and Crime Commissioner replaces the Kent Police Authority - and oversees Kent Police, with the power to hire and fire the Chief Constable.

Cllr Wauchope, 55, who has worked as a criminal barrister for 27 years, said: "Over the years I have worked in fighting crime with police officers from over twelve different forces: and am easily the best qualified of all the candidates named so far.

"My policies are consistent with the common sense policies of Ukip and the people of Kent who have repeatedly said they want to see more police on the streets and tougher action to deal with anti social behaviour.

"My experience as a barrister has confirmed my beliefs that the police need to spend more time preventing and investigating real crimes and there needs to be an effective plan to stop reoffending amongst youths and young adults."

Kent MEP and Ukip leader Nigel Farage said that Cllr Wauchope was "an excellent candidate and one who has my total support in his campaign".

He pledged to take to the streets of the county in support of his candidate.

Ukip are being backed by many to spring a surprise in the elections. While arguments over voting for a political candidate rage on, the smart money is on disillusioned Tory voters opting instead for the Euro-sceptic Ukip, with a view that it shares its traditional toughline on crime.

The victor, however, will be the one who manages to mobilise and motivate their vote. So far public awareness of the election has been extremely low and experts say they expect one of the lowest ever turn-

THE ROLE

What is the Kent Police & Crime Commissioner (PCC)?

It replaces the existing Kent Police Authority which oversees the running of Kent Police, determining budgets and hiring the Chief Constable. It will be wound down in November and replaced with the elected position of a single Kent Police & Crime Commissioner, who will carry out a similar role, but be more accountable to the public.

Who gets to vote for the Kent PCC?

Everyone who is eligible to vote. Each county will go to the polls on November 15 to elect a figure.

Who are the candidates?

The main political parties are putting up candidates, in addition to a number of independents. These include: Craig Mackinlay (Con), Harriet Yeo (Lab), Piers Wauchope (Ukip), Steve Uncles (English Democrats) Ann Barnes (Ind), Dai Liyanage (Ind), Fergus Wilson (Ind) and Ken Little (Ind).

Why should I care?

Because whoever is elected will be one of the most powerful influences on how the police patrol our streets and fight crime in the county. Among the issues at the heart of the debate are whether the elected representative would look to privatisate parts of the police force by hiring external organisations to take over certain roles and the issue of having a political figure in charge, as well as combating some of the most savage cuts to the force enforced by central Government cut-backs.

"Excellent service as ever from Haynes. We have several Ford Dealerships nearer to us but the service and attention we get at Haynes means we go back!"

"Complete satisfaction."

"I've always had really good service when visiting Haynes."

"First class all round service."

"The service I receive from Haynes is second to none and worth the 50 mile drive."

"Excellent and the staff were friendly and polite."

"Excellent overall customer service. Car serviced and cleaned to an excellent standard."

"In my opinion the best Ford Dealership in the county – they always strive to deliver the best possible service."

Schoolboy joins the 999 heroes as fire awards honour acts of bravery

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

FIREFIGHTERS who saved the life of a trucker caught up in a blazing smash were just two of the heroes recognised at the annual Kent Fire and Rescue Service awards.

Borough Green firefighters Carl Eden and Craig Pattison received certificates of congratulation for their actions.

A lorry driver suffered a heart attack following a lorry fire in March, on the M20.

Putting their own lives at risk from motorway traffic to reach the man, the pair carried out CPR and used a defibrillator to resuscitate him.

A much younger real-life hero was Robert Noubine, 12, who rescued his disabled 22-year-old brother from a fire last November.

After discovering flames in his Dartford home, Robert sounded the alarm, closed internal doors to prevent the fire spreading and alerted his mother. He then helped his brother out of bed, into his shower chair, covered him in duvets and wheeled him out of their home.

As fire crews arrived Robert gave them clear, calm advice on the blaze.

Community Engagement Officer Paul Stanbridge received recognition for the compassion and support he showed an elderly couple when he realised during a routine visit that they needed assistance, and stayed until it arrived.

And fellow Community Safety Administration Officer Amanda Fraser also got a certificate of congratulation for supporting the growth of KFRS's Vulnerable Persons Team.

There were many other certificates of congratulations handed out.

Off-duty Cranbrook crew manager Andy Parks, provided first aid assistance at a road crash in Goudhurst Road, Cranbrook, in May, after two people were hurt in an overturned car.

Also off duty at the time, Aldington firefighter Will Parkinson helped save the life of an 11-month-old baby who suffered a fit, at Bonnington village fete in June. He kept little Keira Archbold stabilised until paramedics arrived and she made a full recovery.

Care worker Mary Patterson rescued an elderly client with dementia from a Tenterden bungalow fire in April.

Control room worker Hannah Park was still in training when she took a 999 call from a 15-year-old girl trapped in a top-floor bedroom of her smoke-filled three-storey home in Blackball Road, Ashford. Hannah provided vital fire safety advice and gained essential information to guide fire crews to the teenager.

Off-duty Teynham firefighter Ben Corello, rushed to the aid of a man hit by a car in Milton Regis in April, and kept the man's cervical spine immobilised, talking to him and keeping him calm despite suffering facial injuries and losing a lot of blood.

Eight members of Thames Side's Red Watch were honoured for saving a man trying to jump from a Gravesend railway bridge. Firefighter Ross Allen attached a line from the fire engine around his chest, climbed over the railings and stood on a ledge on the side of the bridge. Ross supported the man around his waist, holding him until his colleagues could lift him to safety.

Long Service and Good Conduct Medals went to Ramsgate Crew Manager Paul Cook; Whitstable Watch Manager Nick Salt; Fire Safety Engineer Andrew Strand; Larkfield Watch Manager Mitchell Kelly; Control Room Operator Caroline Spicer; and Lin West from SM Projects.

KFRS chief executive Ann Millington, together with Lord Lieutenant for Kent Lord De L'Isle, and chairman of Kent and Medway Fire and Rescue Authority, Bryan Cope, presented the awards.

Ms Millington said: "This event gives us the opportunity to recognise the bravery and quick thinking of our staff and local people and it also reminds us of all the positive work going on around us. I would like to express my thanks, not just to them, but also to all the staff at KFRS for their dedication and hard work."

COUNTRYSIDE

Heavy rain and flooding helps foreign invaders to take over

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE wet weather earlier this year has created an extra danger around Kent's river banks – a mass invasion of hogweed that can cause painful blistering if it touches the skin.

Kent County Council is concerned the plant is taking over some stretches of riverbank, and has launched a massive fight back.

Officials said bad weather can cause flooding which in turn increases the spread of seeds from plants such as giant hogweed and Himalayan balsam – spreading it further up banks and inland.

Heavy rain can also break up the leaves and stems of Japanese knotweed, potentially increasing the spread of new plants.

A County Hall spokesman said: "The rain also slows the rate of treatment too, as we can't chemically spray plants in bad weather, and that was an issue this summer."

Its Medway Valley Country-side Partnership is working to tackle the invaders which are destroying native plants.

Giant hogweed and Japanese knotweed were introduced to ornamental gardens and estates in the early 19th century – and have been spreading ever since.

With its large flowerheads and wide leaves, giant hogweed lives up to its name and can reach heights of around 20ft. It may seem perfectly harmless, but it can badly burn and blister the skin if touched.

Japanese knotweed has a bamboo-like appearance with white flowers and shovel-shaped leaves. Astonishingly, it can grow up to 10cm a day and spread by just tiny parts of the plants being broken off and discarded. Therefore it is illegal to irresponsibly dispose of the plants without first seeking professional advice.

It is even illegal for landowners to ignore it. The plant causes erosion as it spreads across large areas, destroying other plants and habitats.

The MSCP's project to treat the problem now covers more than 150 miles of riverside and by liaising with dozens of landowners, around 20,000 giant hogweed plants and dozens of masses of Japanese knotweed are treated every year.

Viscount De L'Isle, the Lord Lieutenant of Kent, owns Penshurst Place Estate, which is one of the sites where Japanese knotweed has been identified.

He said: "Everyone needs to be more aware of the invasive effect of these plants on the landscape and support organisations like Medway Valley Countryside Partnership in eliminating these extremely destructive species."

The Environment Agency has given additional funds to the MSCP to treat all the invasive plants on the Penshurst Place Estate and some other private gardens in the Penshurst area. This blanket approach on the eradication of Japanese knotweed will begin the reduction and eventual removal in this area.

KCC's head of countryside access Mike Overbeke said: "Many people will have seen these plants growing in Kent's countryside unaware of the problems they cause and the cost involved in tackling them.

"While they are ultimately the responsibility of landowners, we want to make sure all who enjoy exploring Kent's countryside stay alert to the risks too. It needs to be a collective effort to eradicate these species from our riverways."

SPREAD: Japanese knotweed has to be carefully disposed of

Little red Corvette is stolen

POLICE are appealing for information after a rare go-cart was stolen from the Ashford area.

The red Corvette fibre glass go-cart was taken from an outbuilding at a house some time between 6pm on September 7 and 10am on September 11.

The go-cart measures around 6ft by 3ft and is powered by a small petrol engine. Police say it is an extremely rare collectable and only available as an import from the USA.

Punch and Judy shows thrive, despite seaside crowds' closed wallets

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

PUNCH and Judy shows are more popular than ever, according to puppeteers celebrating the 350th anniversary of the children's entertainment.

However, the traditional sound of "he's behind you" on Kent's beaches is becoming a distant memory as crowds refuse to pay up as the final curtain falls.

Broadstairs is the only seaside town in the county to host a summertime Punch and Judy show on its beach.

John Alexander, who performed Punch and Judy shows on the Thanet beach for 10 years before he retired, said the custom was dying on Britain's coastline and Broadstairs was showing others "that's the way you do it".

He said: "There are only four shows left on Britain's beaches, and it's a real credit to Broadstairs they are supporting it and will continue to have one.

"The public think the council should pay, and when you go out with a hat, people with £700 cameras round their neck say they have nothing on them."

However, despite the reluctance from some to cough up a contribution after the performance, children and adults alike are still chuckling at performers across the country.

The traditional slapstick story surrounds the character of Punch looking after a baby for his wife Judy.

STANDING ROOM ONLY: Puppeteer Miles Phillips refutes claims show is too violent go about it, but children see more violence on the 6 o'clock news than you do at a Punch and Judy show.

"It's certainly very popular, and the children love it.

"It's been here for 350 years and it's going to be here for a good few years to come."

'Guardian angel' soldier killed in Afghanistan

A SOLDIER born in Tunbridge Wells has been killed in Afghanistan.

Captain James Anthony Townley from the Corps of Royal Engineers died on September 21 in Camp Bastion, Helmand province.

The 29-year-old died from wounds sustained while serving at Forward Operating Base Shawqat.

Capt Townley was born in Tunbridge Wells and grew up near Glastonbury in Somerset. An avid sportsman, he leaves behind his parents Peter and Jacqui, his brother Nick, and girlfriend Helen.

His family said: "James was a wonderful, loving and caring son and brother. He was devoted to his girlfriend, Helen. He was our guardian angel and our hero."

Major brewers are left bitter as tax breaks aid rise of microbreweries

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

LARGE breweries could create more jobs if they received government tax breaks like their smaller competitors, according to the chief executive of Kent's biggest brewery.

Shepherd Neame boss Jonathan Neame believes the increasing numbers of microbreweries based in Kent is a sign of government help, while larger breweries face bigger Inland Revenue bills.

Microbreweries are benefiting from a progressive beer duty introduced by Gordon Brown in 2002, which offers a 50 per cent tax break to businesses manufacturing between 5,000 and 20,000 hectolitres per year.

More than 25 microbreweries now operate in the county, thanks to the growing popularity of locally brewed specialist ales.

However, despite welcoming the increase of breweries in Kent, Mr Neame said his business is not able to continue to expand because of the company's tax bill.

He said: "The only caveat we have is that the Government is trying to invest in small traders by giving them tax breaks. We also want investment and to create employment.

"Large breweries are paying twice as much tax as small breweries and what is happening is living proof of what can happen if the Government invests in a sector.

"It proves the point that if the Government invests in a trade as they have done for small breweries, you can get a huge explosion in investment and job creation in the trade.

"We want to invest in pubs, we would invest more in trading and we would create jobs which would benefit Kent."

Faversham brewer Shepherd Neame's tax bill has increased by 42 per cent in the last four years, and the company would like to benefit from the tax breaks microbreweries receive.

However, Mr Neame said it was an exciting time for the industry with a number of breweries setting up shop in the county and producing ale.

Ramsgate Brewery was formed 10 years ago, and is regularly approached by entrepreneurs who want to start microbreweries in Kent.

Director Lois Gadd believes there has been a

BOTTOMS UP: Sheps' Jonathan Neame says microbrewers benefit from Government tax breaks shift towards local produce in the last couple of years, with microbreweries benefiting from this trend.

She said: "The consumer wants to know things have been produced in a suitable way. That's not particular to breweries, but it has worked really well for us.

"We have a lot of people discovering real ale – there's a lot more women drinking ale, more young people – and there's a lot more real ale being produced, so I think it will remain a strong industry."

And this increase in popularity is seeing a surge in business, with Nelson Brewers in Chatham reporting a 25 per cent increase in turnover.

Owner Piers MacDonald said: "I think there is a good feeling of local produce because ale production and food is doing well. Competition can only be a good thing for our business, and we can only see the industry growing."

Last Saturday, Larkins brewery in Edenbridge won a coveted Camra (Campaign for Real Ale) award for the quality of its beer.

Summer tourism boost

BUSINESSES are celebrating after a triumphant summer season with a surge of people visiting Thanet. The Margate visitor information centre saw a 25 per cent increase in July and August compared to last year, and a website promoting Thanet received record visits online. The 200th birthdays of Dickens and Pugin is believed to have increased interest from tourists. Cllr Iris Johnston said there was now a "feel-good factor" across the isle. She added: "Those who run our local attractions have set a wonderful example."

ACCIDENT

Car crash kills woman

POLICE are appealing for witnesses after the passenger in a car which smashed into the back of a recovery lorry died. The crash happened on the A28 at Godmersham near Ashford at 3.35pm last Saturday. Three vehicles were involved in the collision – a Renault recovery lorry, a Ford Transit van, and a Suzuki Wagon. The male driver and a female passenger of the Suzuki were from the Folkestone area. Both were taken to the William Harvey Hospital, but the woman died later that evening.

Local funding for local businesses

One way we're helping business get ahead ➤

To all local businesses,

As the UK's biggest lender to small businesses, we're committed to making it easy and affordable for businesses to access finance. As part of this commitment, we're making available £2.5bn of funding specifically to support local businesses.

This funding is limited and all loans approved will be fee-free and offered on a first-come, first-served basis. What's more, you could also qualify for a 1% interest rate discount if your loan is for five years or less.

This is among the most affordable funding we've been able to offer small to medium size businesses for some time and will hopefully encourage more businesses to take the opportunity to invest in growth.

All of our Relationship Managers, with local knowledge and expertise, are ready to discuss your business' funding requirements with you – to ensure you get the right option for your business.

To find out how your business can benefit from the £2.5bn funding, please call us free on 0800 529 8054, Minicom 0800 404 6161 or visit natwest.com/ahead

CONSERVATION

Trust seeks vital funds to save ancient fenland for rare wildlife

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A WILDLIFE charity is appealing for help to raise vital funds to ensure a future for Kent's last remaining ancient fenland.

The Ham Fen nature reserve, a Site of Special Scientific Interest, near Sandwich, was at risk of being lost forever until Kent Wildlife Trust used a pioneering scheme involving beavers to rescue the precious land.

But now the Trust is hoping to try and raise £58,000 to extend the site in a bid to ensure the survival of even more rare species living in the area.

The land is a type of wetland helping to store floodwater while creating a habitat for wildlife.

In 1991, the Trust took over the fenland where only half a hectare remained, with most of it scrubbed over and the surrounding land drained and converted to pasture.

They introduced a family of beavers as a conservation tool, using the animal's ability to harvest trees and plants, raise the water table with dams and enrich the wetland habitat, which supports the survival of rare species including water vole, reed bunting, and wetland birds.

The reserve has since begun to thrive and the beaver have bred for a fourth successive year.

The Trust's reserves officer John McAllister said they now wanted to extend the protected site. This section will need to be leased from a landowner.

"Under our stewardship and the continued success of the beaver, Ham Fen is flourishing and we now have the opportunity to increase the 72 acres by a third," he said.

"To do this, we are aiming to raise £58,000 from our generous supporters.

"This important conservation project will extend the fenland, providing greater opportunity for wildlife to thrive, for the fen to become ecologically more viable and to increase the chances of survival for rare species dependent upon this scarce habitat."

Pair are convicted in 'landmark' case after smuggling legal drugs

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IN WHAT is being hailed a "landmark" case, two men who smuggled legal drugs in to Dover have been successfully prosecuted after a court was told the paracetamol and caffeine were likely to be used as cutting agents for heroin.

Anthony Woodford, 23, of Lascelles Avenue, Harlow, and David Lewinson, 44, of West Hendon Broadway, Collindale, Hendon, both stood trial after Lewinson was found in possession of 150kgs of paracetamol and caffeine at the Port of Dover on April 21, last year.

Canterbury Crown Court was told investigators believed they would be used as a cutting agent for heroin, to make it go further and increase profit, bringing in something around £5 million for drug dealers.

Officers from the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate launched an investigation which identified Woodford as the organiser of the trip.

Afterwards, Det Sgt Mat Scott of the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate said: "This is the first time in the UK that a successful prosecution has been made when the drug found has not itself been an illegal substance.

The prosecution was able to prove, beyond doubt, that the huge quantity of paracetamol and caffeine was intended to be used with heroin.

This has been a successful test case and therefore has set a precedent for this type of offence."

On April 20, last year, a white Volkswagen Caddy van travelled from Dover Eastern Docks to Dunkirk on a Norfolk-line ferry.

The van, driven by Lewison, returned to the UK the following day.

A quantity of ground powder was discovered and later tests confirmed it to be 150kgs of the apparent cutting agent.

Following an investigation by officers from the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate, Woodford was arrested.

Both men were charged in February for an offence under the Serious Crime Act 2007 and they will be sentenced on October 19.

The charge said they imported a quantity of caffeine and paracetamol, which was capable of encouraging or assisting the supply of a controlled drug of Class A, namely diamorphine to another, intending to encourage or assist in committing a crime.

Victoria hotel sold

AN 18th century Tunbridge Wells hotel – famed as a retreat of Queen Victoria – has changed hands in a move thought to run into seven figures. The Royal Wells Hotel on Mount Ephraim, along with its pub, the Beau Nash Tavern, have been sold to Faversham brewery Shepherd Neame for an undisclosed sum. Queen Victoria made frequent visits to the hotel in the early part of the 19th century, and later granted it the use of her coat of arms. It remains displayed at the top of building.

Charity drive kicks off

KENT Football Association is to support Kent Air Ambulance for the 2012-13 season by naming a shield in the charity's honour. Clubs playing in the historic Intermediate Challenge Shield raised £1,000 for the Marden-based helicopter last year. The competition comprised 38 teams from Kent County Football League and the Kent Invicta Football League. Kent FA will hold the competition in the charity's honour for the second season with each club taking part collecting funds from players and supporters.

Footballer's international career kicks off with the help of homeless charity

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

FOLLOWING the success of women's football at the London Olympics, the sport is enjoying unprecedented success at all levels.

And that includes the Homeless World Cup, where one Kent player will be in the England squad.

Striker Rosie Martin, 18, is currently staying at a Canterbury hostel run by homelessness charity Porchlight.

But next month, she will be in Mexico for the international event playing in the England women's team.

It runs from October 6-14 in Mexico City, and Rosie can't wait to take part following her battle to turn her life around. She has even started a course in health and social care at Canterbury College and is beginning to rebuild relationships with her family.

The annual football tournament unites teams of homeless people from countries all around the globe. Rosie will be joining seven other young homeless women from across the country to compete against 13 other national teams.

Personal struggles take a terrible toll on young people, and Rosie revealed her mental health deteriorated so much she attempted suicide twice.

She said: "I self-harmed on a daily basis and tried to commit suicide twice before I was readmitted to hospital. My parents said they wouldn't feel comfortable taking me back home after that. The hospital suggested Porchlight and I applied for a place in one of the charity's young persons' hostels.

SPORTSWOMAN: Rosie Martin

"Luckily, I was accepted.

The accommodation has given me something stable to build from and the support has been amazing. It has meant I have stopped self-harming altogether. I couldn't do it by myself; I needed someone fighting my corner."

Since turning things around, her confidence has blossomed and she became dedicated to the regular football training sessions run by the Homeless Football Association.

Rosie impressed the selection committee so much, they offered her a place in the squad.

This year is the first time England enters both a men's and a women's team in the tournament.

With just weeks to go, Rosie said: "I doubt I'll ever have an opportunity like this again. I have already met lots of new people at the training sessions and enjoyed tours of Arsenal and Manchester United's stadiums. I even got to meet England player Fara Williams."

A total of 30 female players were selected to attend training centres at Everton, West Bromwich Albion Ladies, and Arsenal, each earning an FA Junior Leaders Award at the end of it. The players then attended a national Team England Day hosted by Manchester United where the Team England squads were selected.

Richard Barnard, activities co-ordinator at Porchlight, runs regular football training sessions at the charity.

He said: "I am so proud of what Rosie has achieved. Sport has always been an excellent way to encourage vulnerable people to change their lives for the better. It gives individuals the confidence and skills to move forward positively. What could be more positive than playing for your country?"

The Homeless FA will continue training with Rosie on and off the pitch in Mexico, focusing on increasing her self-confidence and leadership skills.

■ For more information on the charity visit www.porchlight.org.uk or see www.homelessworldcup.org to find out about the Homeless World Cup.

KENT REMEMBERED

CONTEMPLATION: The author Charles Dickens in his much-loved Gad's Hill study in Rochester

Changing city inspired Dickens to new heights

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

AUTHOR Charles Dickens is widely regarded as one of the sharpest observers of life to ever put pen to paper.

His much-loved Rochester and the 19th century north Kent countryside with its marshes and remote churches are as much a part of his books as any of the memorable characters which come alive in the pages of classics such as Great Expectations.

In a new work best-selling author Judith Flanders has put together what one critic called "an intoxicating blend of London, life and literature" to examine the influence of the capital city on an outstanding Kent literary figure.

The Victorian City, Everyday Life in Dickens' London is the title of the work which has been published by Atlantic Books – but as with any account of the great writer's life – the county he spent so much of his life looms large.

The 19th century was a time of transformation in Britain and while in the countryside it might appear little was changing, larger towns were seeing the results of the industrial revolution.

But nowhere was this more apparent than on the streets of the capital of the British Empire.

In only a few decades, London grew from a Regency town to the biggest city the world had ever seen, with more than 6.5 million people and railways, street-lighting and new buildings at every turn.

The book explores London's outdoors in a portrait of everyday life on the streets.

From the moment Dickens arrived in the city in 1822, from his earlier home in Chatham, he obsessively walked its streets, recording the everyday struggle for survival which was the state of many of its inhabitants, the unusual sights he encountered, as well as the cruelties which marred so many lives.

Flanders leads her readers through the markets, transport systems, sewers, rivers, slums, cemeteries, gin palaces, chop-houses and entertainment of Dickens' London, to reveal the Victorian capital in all its variety, vibrancy, and squalor.

From the colourful cries of street-sellers to the uncomfortable reality of travel by omnibus, via the many uses for the body parts of dead horses or the unimaginably gruelling working days of hawker children, the book casts light on the darkest parts of the day and age – as well as its splendours.

Key moments in time are revisited, including the funeral of the Duke of Wellington which took place in 1852, following the victor of Waterloo's death at Walmer Castle, where he lived quietly in his later years.

Long forgotten rivers are also a feature of the book.

Pubs and inns were also a staple of the leisure lives of the Victorian population, with many sited along the River Thames.

Several popular haunts were along the waterfront at Gravesend, and the book tells how steamers left London Bridge and moored up at the town.

It also has an account of a trip to Sheerness, undertaken in the late 1860s by a journalist named James Richie on board the vessel Princess Alice.

"They left London Bridge at 10.30 and as they went down-river everyone had 'a good dinner on board' supplemented by tea and shrimps later," writes Flanders.

"Richie (who had a temperance streak) disapproved of the 'unnecessary demand for beer' and judged that 'smoking may be carried to excess'."

The excursion gave the opportunity for "700 or 800" to spend 90 minutes in Sheerness before a return to London with music and dancing.

The book also records as a footnote than on a similar trip the Princess Alice foundered and sank, killing 650 people and injuring 200.

OPINION

Optimistic over care challenges

Cllr Graham Gibbens, Kent County Council's cabinet member for adult social care, on the £18 million cuts facing his department

THERE is no doubt taking £18million from the adult social care budget is a big challenge.

While the savings planned at Kent County Council are both serious and significant, they are part of a change that makes me genuinely optimistic for the future of care in Kent.

We know demand for adult social care is increasing quickly, particularly when it comes to dementia.

Expectations are also rising and there is no quick fix.

We can respond, however, with a creative and innovative approach. This gives us a chance to design a system that meets a wide range of needs and is both effective and sustainable, while costing less.

We are in no way blasé about what needs to be done.

The truth is that without significant, wholesale change, KCC's responsibility for older people will effectively take over most of the council's budget in years to come. At the same time, we face the reality of having less money for this care and support. Taking a bit from here and a bit from there will not be enough – so bold thinking is required.

We've looked to those who use adult social care and their carers to understand better what changes they want. We've listened and shared ideas with the voluntary and community sector, with private care providers and with our health partners, and many others.

The conclusion is that we need to give priority to greater integration of health and social care services, and to preventative services.

We also need to keep investing in enablement – the intensive social care that helps people regain lost independence.

Finally, it is crucial to protect those services that exist so that people have support for living at home and as part of their community.

To make these things happen, I believe it is vital we play to the strengths of all those carers, NHS teams, voluntary groups and businesses that are involved in adult social care.

Most of our money is spent through domiciliary care and residential care organisations that are trusted to provide services on our behalf. However, we haven't often given them the opportunity to direct and advise us about working together more effectively.

Where a domiciliary carer can see that an older person might become less dependent, we should be able to let them be part of the decision-making process, as they are on the ground. This could save money in the long term, while encouraging independence in more situations.

Similarly, if someone enters the social care system, they should not automatically stay in the system for the rest of their lives. Instead, there should be the support they need to regain their independence.

This kind of change means changing the way we work, bringing savings and benefits through less waiting time and fewer visits. Importantly, it could also help slow the growth of costly home care packages, which happen as people become more dependent.

We also need to help people to stay out of the system – not so that we stop offering support, but so we are really in the business of helping people live independently by tackling issues early, focusing on prevention to keep people from being sucked into dependence.

No-one at KCC underestimates the scale of what we are doing – it has taken time to look critically at our system and see how best to change it.

I do believe, however, we are creating something better.

KOS COMMENT

DNA debate: Why we need to be engaged

THE debate over the use of DNA is not one which is likely to fade fast – especially after an expert this week called for all newborn babies to be swabbed in order to provide a comprehensive database to use in the fight against crime.

Many will say it makes perfect sense. After all, if you've done nothing wrong, just what have you to be afraid of? The authorities have your unique biological code on file? But there will be an equal number who see it as a potential threat to our personal liberties.

But the debate is one we must all face – and will no doubt again as scientific advances make it even easier to identify criminals by the clues they leave behind. We should all give it consideration.

Thanks for the music

FEW would have expected the county's biggest music festival to be the latest victim of the economy, but it would seem the Hop Farm Festival is teetering on the brink.

It's loss will be mourned – it put Kent on the music map and when it got it right, hit the high notes.

Lorry levy cash a pipe dream

I THINK some Kent County Council councillors have shown a political naivety if they ever thought they would see any of the revenue collected from a foreign lorry tax.

All they have achieved is putting prices up for us (as any increased costs will be passed to the end consumer), plus another level of bureaucracy.

As trucks pass from Kent into Essex, Surrey etc, will those councils not also want a slice of the generated revenue?

Who will decide this?

With an estimated start-up revenue of £23 million, in the real world how much of this money will actually go to road maintenance?

Some might dribble down for trendy 'halo' traffic schemes, but this is not much help to the majority of motorists as we crash from pothole to pothole.

All that has been achieved is to create a new revenue stream for the Treasury.

Cllr Brian Sweetland may complain about the mess left behind by truck drivers (not always unfounded) and parking of trucks in unsuitable places, but do the foreign drivers always have a choice?

Various governments have laid down stringent driving regulations, but have not supplied the parking and the facilities to meet the legislation.

With a policy of closing public toilets, it is bad enough trying to find one that is open (yes, I might want to go at night) and how many have parking spaces for a 40-tonne lorry Cllr Sweetland?

Terry Hudson, Swalecliffe

Tax all visitors to our country

A TAX on foreign lorries when entering Britain is about time, but this does not help Kent taxpayers – most lorries use

Dover port or are stacked on the M20.

How about employing more staff or specialist equipment at the port with this 'new' money?

Also, the Government should charge all visitors a visa fee to enter the UK – say a £10 or £20. This would have the effect of allowing British passport holders to go through UK lanes while non-UK passport holders would have to pay the fee via other lanes without any perceived discrimination, exactly as the USA and other countries do.

The fee would allow new staff to be employed at airports to check all visitors to the UK including students, business personal, etc, have a valid insurance cover or a bond from their host families while visiting if they need NHS treatment that is not free to them.

If they do not have a bond or insurance visitors get a leaflet (in English) to advise them of our rules on NHS treatment.

Of course, all NHS trusts, doctors' surgeries, etc, must enforce this new rule even if they have to pay a person to police it. It is cheaper than the system installed now that is totally inept and is picked up by you and me.

Ken Little, Stanfield

Badger cull is just madness

TIME is fast running out for badgers in Kent.

I am dismayed to see the Tory-led Government is ploughing ahead with plans to begin a cull by issuing licences to shoot badgers.

Cattle TB (tuberculosis) is a blight on livestock and farmers that must be tackled, but this is a plan which will not work.

An iconic British animal will be slaughtered for no good purpose.

A 10-year scientific study on TB and badgers concluded a cull "would not only fail to achieve a beneficial effect, but would entail a substantial risk of increasing the incidence of cattle TB and spreading the disease". In short, it could make things worse

It was for that reason Labour ruled out a cull when in office.

A cull didn't make sense then and it doesn't make sense now. The Government should abandon this barmy idea and concentrate efforts on a comprehensive vaccination plan.

Plan early and rest a bit easier

RE: LAST week's KoS comment on 'Worrying cost of the final farewell'.

I read this comment with some interest as I work within the funeral profession. It is, as you suggest, becoming more expensive to say a fond farewell when a loved one dies.

Indeed, taxes and death are two certainties of this life.

Many people today chose to plan and pre-pay for their funeral, the cost can be met by a one-off payment or by paying in instalments (which can be useful for those on limited incomes).

Funeral planning is nothing new; remember Tutankhamun – as soon as he was born courtiers planned for his death.

A funeral pre-payment plan is a secure way of paying for your funeral in advance.

If this option is not one that would wish to be taken advantage of then at the time of death a simple funeral can be obtained from your chosen funeral director. All members of the funeral profession trade associations, NAFD and SAIF, are required to provide a simple service for those that wish for it, or, if costs should be an issue.

I also think it worth pointing out the cost of a funeral is made up of many different components: cremation/burial fees, possible doctors fees' (for cremation), possibly a minister or celebrant, as well as funeral director's fees for his services.

Help with funeral costs can be obtained by application to the Department of Work and Pensions if one is in receipt of certain benefits.

What I think needs to borne in mind is that the public have a choice as with everything in life, there is also multiple choice over what sort of funeral one has upon death and those choices equal costs.

Don't suffer pitfalls of early pension release

QAFTER replying to an advertisement in a financial magazine, I was called by a firm that arranges the early release of money tied up in a pension plan. The salesman explained that legal loopholes allow the withdrawal of pension money before the normal minimum age of 55. Can you say how this is possible, as it completely contradicts advice I was given by Prudential?

ATHE most common loophole used by firms that advertise early pension release schemes is to transfer your British pension plan to a plan in a foreign country, as if you were perhaps intending to go abroad to work or to retire. Once your pension pot is in the offshore plan, it may be possible under the laws of the foreign country to release money to you without the same strings that apply in Britain. But this is very risky. Firms that arrange these deals charge about 25pc as their fee. If you have saved £100,000 towards retirement, £25,000 will disappear before you get your hands on a penny. And if the UK taxman decides the whole deal is bogus, you will face a tax bill of up to 55pc of the pension savings you have withdrawn. The whole set-up is not worth the high charges and the serious risk of a massive tax demand.

QI AM one of six beneficiaries under a relative's will. For family reasons, some of us would like to make sure that our sister, who looked after our parents, inherits a larger share. I believe it is legally possible to change the will, but is there a time limit for this?

ABENEFICIARIES must all agree to any changes. You have two years to change the will under a Deed of Variation. It would be advisable to see a solicitor.

QI BOOKED a flight to Spain, but then had to cancel because of an unexpected work commitment. I then rebooked for a later date. I had expected some kind of penalty, but the Spanish airline is refusing any refund whatsoever on the first ticket.

AYOU sent me a copy of your booking form, showing the airline's terms and conditions. It is clear that when you booked the first ticket, you chose a lower price than that did not allow for any cancellation. I am afraid this means you have simply lost the price of that flight. But it is not all bad news. The ticket price includes government taxes. If you do not travel, no tax is due. Contact the airline and point this out, and you should get back about £12. Not a fortune, but better than nothing.

QI HAVE never invested in stocks and shares, but I understand that unit trusts are suitable for a beginner because they spread the risks. If so, can you suggest a unit trust that backs British companies?

AUNIT trusts put your money into a basket of shares, which is less risky than buying shares in just one company. The past year has not been the best for UK companies and their shares, but take a look at the Fidelity UK Smaller Companies Fund (0808 252 8343). As the name suggests, the fund managers try to spot up-and-coming British businesses. If you had invested £1,000 last summer, you would be showing a modest profit, with units worth about £1,070. But if you had bought your units three years ago, you would be doing very well, with an investment now worth more than £2,000.

QMY LATE husband held shares in Regent Inns, but I cannot trace the company or find what they are worth today. Do you have any information?

ASORRY, but Regent Inns collapsed. HM Revenue & Customs officially recognises the shares as becoming worthless on December 10, 2010.

QI MADE a complaint against my bank when it mistakenly said I was overdrawn and refused to pay direct debits that were due. The Financial Ombudsman awarded me £100 compensation a month ago but the bank has not paid.

AI STRONGLY suspect that this is simply inefficiency. Awards by the ombudsman can be enforced by the county court, and a bank that refuses to respect the ombudsman could even find that it loses its licence. Show the bank this from the paper – and let me know what happens.

An annuity is for life, so be sure to cash in wisely

As annuity rates continue to fall, what steps can you take to protect yourself? ADAM AIKEN reports

YOU have just retired and are receiving your state pension – but it is not enough to live on.

You need to access the money you have squirrelled away over the years in your private or work pension pot, and you need it to provide a regular income for the rest of your life.

This is where an annuity comes in.

An annuity – one of the most popular forms of pension – involves handing over your savings pot to an insurer, and in return you are paid a monthly income for life.

That is the easy part, though.

The trick is to know where to buy your annuity from – and what sort of deal to go for. To make things even more awkward, annuity rates have plummeted over the years, and someone retiring today will get less bang for their buck than someone who retired only a few months earlier.

So why are annuity rates falling – and what can you do to maximise the returns you will get?

Your options

The first thing to know is the different types of annuity that are available.

Some annuities start at a lower monthly level, but rise every year to keep pace with the cost of living.

Others will continue to support your husband or wife should you die first. And then there are enhanced annuities for people considered to be at greater risk of dying early.

"Annuities are usually provided by insurance companies," said Melvyn Pye, a chartered financial planner at Smith & Pinching.

"When deciding how much annuity income an insurance company will guarantee depends on a number of factors, but the key ones are your life expectancy and interest rates."

It is thanks to both of these factors that annuity rates have fallen in recent years.

Life expectancy

Over the past century, life expectancy has increased by five hours a day.

This means people born today will live on average more than six days longer than people born just a month earlier.

The reason this affects annuities is that pensions providers have to make the money they pay you last longer.

The longer they think you will live, the less they will pay you on a monthly basis.

Interest rates

The insurance company providing

DECISION TIME: Make sure you shop around for the right annuity to suit you your annuity has to invest your money where it can guarantee itself an income, so it can then pay you. Government bonds, or 'gilts', are a favourite place for insurance companies because they pay a specific amount of interest for a fixed period of time, and are considered to be risk-free.

But the interest rate – or 'yield' – on gilts has fallen to a very low level.

The reasons for this are a little complicated, but the important thing to know is that government policy means there is little change expected for the foreseeable future.

"I would not bank on annuity rates improving to any extent over the next few years," said Mr Pye.

"When gilt prices start to fall and yields start to rise, there may be an improvement, but it is impossible to say when this will happen."

So what are the options?

You will not be able to find an annuity provider who has managed to buck the trend of falling rates, but you can maximise your returns by looking for the best deal.

"It is essential to shop around for the best annuity rate," said Mr Pye.

"You do not have to accept the annuity rate on offer from your pension provider, and in most instances there will be no charge for taking the savings you have built up and using them to buy an annuity with an alternative provider."

Mr Pye said that even after stripping out the worst offers, there could be a difference of up to 20pc between the leading deals on offer at any given time, and that made scouring the market crucial.

"Once an annuity has been set up, it is usually impossible to change the terms in the future, so decisions about whether the annuity will also be for the benefit of a husband or wife, or whether it will increase each year, must be made at outset," he said.

Do you qualify for an enhanced annuity?

If you have suffered a serious medical condition, or if there is history of life-threatening illness in your family, you might qualify for a higher annuity rate – higher monthly payments, in other words.

Put brutally, this is because the insurance companies think you are more likely to die early, so they offer you better terms in the expectation that they will not be paying you a monthly income for too long, and they will be able to keep the remainder of the pot of cash you have built up.

Mr Pye said conditions that often led to enhanced annuities included cancer, diabetes, heart problems, lung disease, multiple sclerosis and strokes. Smokers often benefit from a higher rate – they are, after all, more likely to die early than non-smokers – and some insurance companies will make allowances for where you live, and even for your former occupation.

An ex-miner living in Glasgow is assumed to have a lower life expectancy than a retired architect living in Tunbridge Wells, for example.

This might all sound horribly morbid, but the system is what it is, so if you think you qualify for higher payments from your pension, make sure you do not sign up for an annuity until you have inquired about enhanced deals.

This is Folkestone... but not as we know it

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE multi-million-pound regeneration of Folkestone harbour will be unlike any other such project undertaken in the UK, those behind the scheme are promising.

An outline planning application has been submitted to Shepway District Council for the development of the seafront. A decision is due in the spring.

It is not a detailed planning application but provides for the building of up to 1,000 houses – including some on the beach itself – together with public spaces, shops and recreational facilities. If planning permission is granted, it is envisaged development would start in the area by the Leas Lift, moving north-east along the seafront to the harbour.

No costings have been finalised, but it is expected to be in the hundreds of millions – with the cash being made available by a foundation established by philanthropist Roger de Haan, who has already ploughed £50 million into the arts-led regeneration of The Old High Street and Tontine Street areas.

Folkestone Harbour Company spokesman Peter Bettley said: "People sometimes think that because this project has been going on a long time anything is better than nothing.

"But that is not Roger's view. We are seeing a growing investment in Folkestone's future, with businesses and people relocating here, and that is partially due to the legacy of buildings left from the Victorian and Edwardian eras. So that shows looking long-term is the correct way forward.

"We want to ensure the plans put in place will ensure a sustainable future for the harbour area.

"It is also our intention to create something unlike anything seen before – with an overall cohesion but individual buildings with their own distinct architecture and features."

The application under consideration by councillors reflects the culmination of some three years' work by leading architect practice Terry Farrell and Partners, together with a team representing the landowner, Folkestone Harbour Company, and experts in a variety of specialist disciplines.

This has included two full rounds of public consultation in spring 2010 and autumn 2011 on a range of ideas and proposals, and the results have been fed back into the planning process.

Further consultation on the submitted proposals will now be led by Shepway District Council as part of its determination of the application.

The backers say they have not modelled their ideas on any existing town or city – "not Brighton, not Amsterdam" – as they want it to be unique.

The proposals include critical factors such as environmental considerations, improvements to transport in the harbour and seafront area and acknowledging the heritage of the site. It also sets out clear ambitions for the project over the next 10 to 15 years, with the exact timetable subject to prevailing economic circumstances.

The backers say "great care" has been taken to present plans that are viable and can be delivered in a way that is "sympathetic to Folkestone's existing built environment".

The plan is designed to enable development of the site in phases, thereby helping to manage financial exposure for potential developers.

Each of these phases will see the preparation of an individual planning application, where design of buildings will be shown in detail. The outline application establishes the overall design for the site, including the layout and extent of streets along which the development will take place, other public squares and spaces and landscaping.

The plan has provision for water-based activities, while the street scene and public spaces will incorporate restaurants, small-scale retail spaces and heritage use as well as housing.

A statement by the backers reads: "The area represents a unique opportunity to design a cohesive townscape next to the sea that blends well with its natural environment and existing heritage, but that also provides well-designed and sustainable amenities for the people who live in Folkestone and for visitors to the town."

The regeneration team admits the seafront and harbour site has been complicated to plan and will be expensive to develop, with flood defences, public and private transport and demand on infrastructure all issues that need to be addressed.

The outline application envisages a range of housing units, from one-bedroom flats to larger luxury homes.

The market for these is expected to come from existing residents attracted by the opportunity to live by the sea as well as buyers who are relocating to the area, attracted equally by Folkestone's 55-minute journey time to London.

Farrell's team has worked on the principle that sea views will be optimised, residents will have access to outdoor/garden space and that new public space will be created.

There is potential for job-creation during the construction phase and in the longer term in the infrastructure supporting the new community, including in shops and restaurants within the development area, say the backers.

Folkestone Harbour Company's Trevor Minter said: "This outline plan is an important step towards realising a once-in-a-century opportunity to create a seafront of which Folkestone can be proud. The challenges are enormous, but we are determined to get the formula right, even if this takes time."

Firms turn to virtual offices in bid to bring down overheads

By Joe Bill

joe.bill@archant.co.uk

OFFICE jobs could become a thing of the past as the number of companies taking part in 'virtual working' – where there is no defined physical workplace – rises in the county.

According to virtual-office supplier Regus, new and growing firms in Kent are turning their backs on large offices and expensive buildings.

Regus claims that fixed overheads, especially full-time physical premises, are causing more companies to consider alternative solutions for the way their employees work.

The group says that demand for virtual-office services in the county is at an unprecedented high, with 42 per cent of firms in Maidstone, for example, citing "reducing fixed workspace" as one of their top ways of cutting costs without damaging growth prospects, while 27 per cent report they are bolstering their workforce with flexible workers and freelancers rather than full-time staff.

One firm using the virtual option is Answers & Solutions Kent, a group that provides outsourced business-to-business marketing services.

Managing director Richard Romain said: "In order to thrive in today's challenging economic climate and to keep our fees competitive, we operate a slim and virtual business model which involves using trusted freelancers rather than full-time staff and not having physical premises.

"I started working from home and hired a separate company specifically to answer our calls.

"Although I had a nice custom-built home office, I never felt it was professional to meet clients in my own home, but I got tired of meeting them at hotels. While the call-handling company was competent, it was very expensive.

"So I took a virtual office at the Regus West Malling centre last year. They deliver the service that the call-handling company was delivering plus a whole virtual-office function for less money.

"I cannot now understand why any business would want an answering-machine when they can have their calls answered by a real person.

"The West Malling centre receptionists know me and treat my customers the way I want them to be treated."

A number of successful entrepreneurs have admitted starting their business with a virtual office – including Dragons' Den star James Caan, who started out with a virtual office in Pall Mall, central London.

Clients can use 'on demand' services like booking private meeting rooms or daily office space, or even have their business post delivered there.

Steve Purdy, UK managing director at Regus, said: "We attribute the strong demand for our virtual office to the rising number of home-based and small businesses looking for workspace support that is low-cost, low-risk and can dramatically increase productivity.

"Local entrepreneurs are really embracing the potential of the new, virtual way of doing business, banishing the rigid 20th-century attitude that it is necessary to have a full-time, physical workplace.

"When you're starting out,

VIRTUAL FAN: Richard Romain, of Answers & Solutions Kent, it is crucial to have a fixed business address that you can use on company stationery and that will receive mail, a local phone number and someone on hand to answer your calls.

"Your customers don't care where you are carrying out the work, as long as they can get hold of you at a central point."

European success for cross-Channel trains

BEST SUPPLIER: Eurotunnel is a winner with Deutsche Bahn

EUROTUNNEL has won the 2012 Deutsche Bahn award for Best Supplier at a European railways event held in Berlin.

The prize recognises the best overall performance by an infrastructure or rolling-stock specialist.

The German rail network collaborates with almost 35,000 suppliers across the world, so its recognition of the cross-Channel rail operator underlines the commitment by Eurotunnel to deliver a reliable and environmentally-friendly freight-shuttle service to its customers, says its managers.

Dr Rüdiger Grube, chairman of Deutsche Bahn, said: "Eurotunnel's freight shuttles have earned this prize for their speed, ease of use and the safety with which they enable hauliers to make deliveries between the Continent and Great Britain and back.

"Eurotunnel is the most environmentally-friendly cross-Channel operator, helping Deutsche Bahn reduce the carbon footprint."

Jacques Gounon, chairman and chief executive officer of Groupe Eurotunnel SA, said: "I am proud to see Eurotunnel's commitment to the quality of its service has been recognised by a railway operator of the reputation of Deutsche Bahn.

"Operating 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, is proof of the constant attention we bring to our customers' needs, and a measure of our competitive edge."

National recognition for financial-services firm

ACCOUNTANCY and financial-services company Reeves has been named finalist in the Mid Tier Firm category and the Tax Award of the Year – Non Global Firm category at the British Accountancy Awards.

In 2011 Reeves won the title of Best Employer in a category backed by Accountancy Age and the Best Companies Group. Reeves also won the prestigious national award for Best Large Firm of the Year at the Accountancy Age Awards in 2009.

Clive Stevens, managing partner at Reeves, which has offices in Canterbury and Chatham, said: "I am delighted Reeves has been recognised."

"I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the staff at Reeves as they are fundamental to the firm's success."

Cable earmarks £1bn for business bank

GOVERNMENT plans to provide £1 billion towards a new bank that will increase lending to businesses have been applauded in Kent.

Business Secretary Vince Cable told the Liberal Democrat conference that the move was to help many small and medium-sized companies that have struggled for credit since the financial crisis began.

The bank will operate via existing lenders and start within 18 months.

It is hoped that the money will be matched by private-sector investment.

The details of where the state funding will come from and the bank's operation will not be made public until Wednesday, December 5, Lib Dem officials said.

Government support will be in the form of both guarantees and equity and will go on to the balance sheet of the new institution and not be reclaimed by the Treasury.

There is a chance that it could generate returns, however.

Roger House, FSB chairman for Kent and Medway, said: "The 'small business bank' is a good thing – we've been calling for this for a long time and we are delighted to see it finally get off the ground. The FSB has carried out significant research assessing similar models in the US and Europe.

"FSB believes the new 'small business bank' will stimulate competition among the high-street banks, in particular the so-called Big Five. The FSB says the move will also open the door to alternative lenders and create new ways for small businesses to get finance, such as credit unions.

"We are certain the newly-created 'small business bank' will help boost confidence and deliver growth in the economy."

Cable promised a more coherent strategy to help get the UK out of recession.

He said: "We need a new British business bank with a clean balance sheet and an ability to expand lending rapidly to the manufacturers, exporters and high-growth companies that power our economy.

"Today I can announce we will have one. I am working with the Chancellor to develop a state-backed institution that will combine up to a billion pounds of new Government capital with a larger private-sector contribution.

"This will then apply further leverage through guarantees to support up to £10bn of finance to SMEs [small and medium enterprises] and mid-sized business – a significant portion of all the lending available.

"To that end, I believe we need an industrial strategy – a positive and ambitious vision built around long-term investment and innovation in skills and science.

"We are so good at so many things in this country, but for too long the mirage of growth based on property speculation and financial gambling has hidden the harder virtues of making things productively.

"We must get behind successful British-based firms in vehicles, aerospace, life sciences and creative industries and our world-class scientists and universities."

John Longworth, director-general of the British Chambers of Commerce, said the Government had "taken a decisive step toward the creation of a British business bank by committing real money to get it off the ground.

"We are pleased that ministers are heeding our call to create a business bank that goes well beyond a re-badging of existing schemes."

"The funding announced by Vince Cable is the first step in a journey toward a British business bank that enables new and growing companies to get access to capital in the same way that they do in Germany, South Korea and the USA."

MidKent upgrade puts it in excellent shape for future

ONGOING improvements at both its Medway and Maidstone campuses prove MidKent College is still in good shape to deliver excellent education, say officials.

The Maidstone campus is currently undergoing a £25m makeover and the state-of-the-art Medway campus is receiving further upgrades to its existing facilities.

And the college says it is still accepting late entries onto its hundreds of courses to ensure students who may have made the wrong decisions elsewhere are not left out in the cold.

Acting principal Sue McLeod said: "The Learning and Skills Council has assessed our financial strength as 'outstanding', which is why we have been able to invest so significantly in both our Medway and Maidstone campuses.

"Our financial management and governance has also received the highest rating possible, which has been confirmed through subsequent reports from both internal and external auditors.

"What this means is that both prospective and existing students can be confident of receiving the best education in top quality premises."

The redevelopment of the Maidstone Campus started earlier this year and will bring the site up to the standard of its Medway counterpart, which opened in 2009 at a cost of £86m.

Due for completion in December, 2013, the Maidstone makeover also includes refurbishment of the premises formerly occupied by the University for the Creative Arts.

Meanwhile, a number of rooms at the Medway campus were also extended or renovated over the summer, including the introduction of a workshop to house the new motor vehicle course as well as a new live performance and recording facility for music students.

Medway putting itself on show at Construction Expo

A SPECIAL day has been put aside in Medway to showcase the area's qualities when it comes to beating the recession.

Visitors will get the chance to see the area's employment opportunities.

Businesses and industry leaders from across the South East and London will descend on the Construction Expo on October 11.

The day is designed to boost employment and regeneration in the area, and form part of an Employment and Skills Day across the area.

The expo will feature leading architects and building contractors right down to small local businesses and people looking for a future career in construction.

The event is aimed at attracting potential developers and offering advice on how to kick-start a career in construction.

It is backed by Medway Council and is being staged at slip 5 of the Historic Dockyard, Chatham. It includes 12 free workshops and speakers such as interior designer and TV presenter, Oliver Heath.

A jobs and apprenticeships fair with more than 50 local employers and training providers will also be held all day at the Brook Theatre, Chatham, offering details on the latest vacancies and courses with the retail, hospitality and security sectors as its focus.

For more information about the Employment and Skills Day, visit www.medway.gov.uk/expo.

College offers range of courses to sixth formers having a change of heart

NORTH West Kent College has an autumn fast-track programme for young people who feel they have made the wrong choice about their education and is offering them with the opportunity to change their mind and go to college.

The courses start on November 5 at the newly re-developed Dartford and Gravesend campuses and the new sustainable construction centre, SusCon.

The college says that school sixth-form is not always the right choice for everyone and it is not uncommon for young people to realise this in the first few weeks of term.

This does not mean that students should be afraid to change their mind. North West Kent College is offering students in this position the chance to start a new course that suits them at the college.

It offers a range of courses and levels with something to suit everyone in: hair, beauty, business, secretarial, computing, construction, sustainable construction, engineering, catering, art and design, music, media, performing arts, professional care, sport, travel and tourism, public services, and gateway learning.

A free shuttle bus service is available from Dartford station to the Dartford campus, and from Medway and Hoo to the Gravesend campus. Both campuses also have free car parking.

SOCIAL SCENE: North West Kent College says it has a wide range of course places ready to start in November

The college says it has an excellent record of providing a pathway to employment and university, and that £90 million has been invested in new facilities at both campuses, which provides some of the best training opportunities in the country.

The college says it is committed to helping students achieve their ambition, whether they wish to achieve high-level professional qualifications or gain the skills to get their first job.

David Gleed, principal of North West Kent College said: "Don't just arrange to come and talk to our staff, arrange to come and talk to our students too and find out why they chose North West Kent College.

"Our students are our best ambassadors and their success is our greatest achievement."

Octopus students get their tentacles on a new car thanks to motor dealer

A MOTOR vehicle training college is to benefit from a new partnership with a car business.

Dagenham Motors, based in Gillingham and Strood, has donated a spare vehicle to motor vehicle college Octopus Opportunities to help develop its training programme.

The Ford Escort will be used by the Rochester college to help students get first-hand experience in motor vehicle maintenance and repair.

Dagenham Motors business manager Dave Rodgers said: "As a local business we feel it is important for us to contribute to the community, which is why we want to support our local colleges and learning centres.

"The students currently studying for motor vehicle qualifications are the service technicians of the future and we want them to have the best training possible."

Octopus Opportunities managing director Jon Whitfield said: "We would like to say a big thank you to Dagenham Motors for donating this vehicle to us."

"The car will be invaluable to the learning and development of our students. There is no alternative to first-hand direct experience of vehicle maintenance and repair."

UCA marks 25th birthday of Where's Wally? books

WHERE'S Wally? Well, no-one is ever quite sure, but one thing is certain – it's the 25th anniversary of him being launched in Maidstone.

He was created a quarter of a century ago by a graduate of the University for the Creative Arts.

Martin Handford graduated in 1980 from UCA Maidstone when it was called Maidstone College of Art.

He saw his crowd-pleasing book published for the first time on September 21, 1987.

Since then, the sky has been the limit, and more than 58 million Where's Wally? books have been sold in 38 countries.

UCA BA (Hons) Illustration course leader, Jane Cradock-Watson, said: "Where's Wally? has become a global phenomenon thanks to Martin's high-quality illustrations and the ingenious visual challenge/puzzle that he brought to books for the first time.

"The illustrations and storylines actively encourage reader participation – making them quite addictive – but they also feature an improbable male main character which has encouraged young boys, in particular, to spend more time looking at books and to read.

"The highly visual premise, with less reliance on text, means the books translate well across language barriers and cultural differences and appeal to an international audience."

WHERE IT ALL BEGAN: UCA Maidstone

The author and illustrator said it was at art college that he learned the craft of illustration and where he developed his colourful style which lost little when printed.

Ms Cradock-Watson added: "They always say that the years at art college are the most valuable as it's the time to experiment, make mistakes and try new things, so it's great to hear that Martin recognised the value of this.

"He is a very visible example of how it's possible to be very successful in illustration if you work hard at it."

THE INTERVIEW

Julian Clary

A stage-managed love affair

Fresh from winning Big Brother, Britain's favourite camp comic Julian Clary is seeking romance on his new tour, which auditions men in the audience to be his husband... as Joe Bill discovers

THE king of the double entendre, Julian Clary is back from reality.

His desert-dry wit and clear compassion for others saw the funny-man navigate his way through the emotional peaks and troughs of the Big Brother house to be crowned winner of this year's celebrity show.

And now he is looking for love. Not real love, of course, as his partner might testify, but the Kent-based comedian has built his new show on the hunt for a man he can call his own.

He said: "The premise is a search for love, so I am auditioning men in the audience to be my husband.

"At the end of the show I will marry one of them and there will be a beautiful civil partnership before your very eyes on stage. There will be confetti and bridesmaids, so all very heart-warming.

"Of course, it's a load of old nonsense, but it is good fun and passes the time, you know."

Clary has been a name in British comedy for almost 30 years fronting TV hits like Channel 4 game-show Sticky Moments in 1989 and Terry & Julian and Prickly Heat during the 90s.

But he is best known for his stand-up shows that have stretched the length of his career since his very early days as a gigging comic known as The Joan Collins Fanclub.

His provocative dress sense, sexual references and occasional public speeches – see the British Comedy Awards 1993 appearance – have sometimes drawn criticism, but Clary remains one of the most recognisable faces in UK comedy.

But faux-marrying a man, straight or gay, on stage in front of an audience is certainly something original and thought-provoking.

What if he actually finds someone he really likes?

Tongue in cheek, the 53-year-old said: "Well, I don't know. My world and persona on stage is one thing, but if you are seriously suggesting that will happen, well, I just don't know. I have a partner. So probably it is best to keep it all as fantasy, I think.

"Yes, anything could happen, so I suppose I am playing with fire. My partner hasn't actually seen the show yet, but I am sure he will be amused."

Clary has taken up presenting, theatre and screen-acting roles, is a journalist for the New Statesman and even became an author with both his autobiography A Young Man's Passage and his novels Murder Most Fab, Devil In Disguise and Briefs Encountered.

Although he now enjoys the life of a country gentleman in his 16th-century Kentish farmhouse, he can't resist the lure of live performance.

His last show Lord Of The Mince clocked up a mammoth 140 dates and his new show Position Vacant Apply Within has already been around Kent at Canterbury, Margate and Folkestone venues, with Tunbridge Wells coming up next week.

He said: "I live here, so I tend to tour here first. It is always nice to be able to get back to my own home after a gig and they are good audiences in Kent – they like a laugh.

"Touring is the thing I enjoy most – it is my own creation and I enjoy the creative process as you tour seeing the show evolve. I like making people laugh – it is a very good way to earn a living. It feels very good for my soul to send people home happy."

Reality television has also become fertile ground for Clary, who took the runners-up position in series two of BBC's flagship show Strictly Come Dancing and has now triumphed in the Big Brother house. Maybe his last reality experience?

"The Jungle? I don't know how appealing that is to me because there is a bit of humiliation involved in that. There was a bit of that in BB, but not too much. I think I have now made my contribution to the genre.

"You never forget about the cameras [in the house], but you learn to live with being watched all the time. Where the stress comes in is Big Brother controlling your emotions with the tasks, the rewards, the punishments and the nominations.

"You think you can keep in your mind it is just a TV show and it is all just nonsense, but you become institutionalised after a while. That is the hard part, as well as the claustrophobia. You have no concept of people watching, really – you don't know how it is being edited."

Clary is a firm believer that his successful stint on the Channel Five reality show has been extremely beneficial to him both in terms of lining up new work and as personal experience.

"The reward is you discover things about yourself and, without saying that I have been on a journey, I think what I discovered is I judge people too quickly, and in fact all these people I thought were frightful when I first went in, there is actually something interesting about everybody if you can but winkle it out.

"There have been lots of TV types sniffing round and, yes, I think there will be something [a TV show] quite soon, but I won't tell you about it until it happens because you never know. BB has paid off for me in that way as well."

The comedian will be looking to stay friends with a few of his housemates now they are all on the outside.

"I will be friends with almost all of them because we have been through this shared experience, but Julie Goodyear in particular and Coleen Nolan is lovely. These are good people I feel I need to stay in touch with."

"I have got the tour, then panto in Southampton at Christmas, then some TV work and then another tour in the spring, and then I might write another book. So I can see the next couple of years being quite cheerful."

But Julian Clary would not be Julian Clary without an innuendo-filled line promoting his new show...

"Because I'm still considered to be quite a catch and because the UK is noted for its heterosexuals on the cusp, there's bound to be stiff competition. I will leave no straight unturned."

You want quiet and cosy by the sea? Head for the waterfront...

IT'S always a tad awkward when you walk into an empty restaurant in the evening.

The candles aren't lit, the romantic music is on mute and the staff don't quite know how to respond to a couple opening the door expecting a quiet yet busy main floor.

That's what faced us as we walked into The Waterfront in Deal, but we decided to make the most of it and were pleasantly surprised when some mood-setting music was put on through the stereo.

Having researched the restaurant online before we set out, we were disappointed to find that both of our favourites had been omitted from the menu despite remaining on its website.

This left my vegetarian companion with just two choices for her main and only one starter option – fortunately, the cooking saved the day.

Both my partner and I had the French-onion soup for starter (it was the only choice for me, too, as none of the others appealed); it was met with nods and noises of approval from both.

The starter came with several pieces of baguette, which accompanied the broth to perfection and got the taste buds tingling in anticipation of the main.

All was well and the waitress on duty was very polite and welcoming, although she maybe tried a little bit too hard to make up for the fact that we were the only couple in the restaurant.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

I'm all for good service, but sometimes a laissez-faire approach can be just as good.

Being a Kent man, I opted for the Romney Marsh lamb shank, served with potatoes and seasonal vegetables, whereas my partner selected four-cheese tagliatelle.

The shank was well presented and tasted pretty good, although it was a bit too fatty in parts. The vegetables, although not to my personal taste, were cooked well and presented in a serving dish.

Although not the best meal I've ever had, it's good to see local restaurants serving the best that the county has to offer.

On the other hand, the tagliatelle was a tad too rich for my companion's palate and left her with a bit of a dry mouth – but nothing a refreshing J20 couldn't deal with.

Both meals were reasonably priced and provided value for money – had there been another couple or small party in the restaurant, it would have enhanced the experience twofold.

The pudding proved a bit of an anticlimax, with a chocolate brownie tasting far from fresh and home-made, while the lemon meringue pie that I selected left much to be desired.

Although The Waterfront appeared able to house only a handful of diners, it has the potential to be a cute and cosy place to take someone to dinner on the lovely east Kent coast.

The setting, by Deal pier, is ideal and the chef appears to know what he or she is doing.

So if you're looking for a nice, quiet place to have dinner beside the sea, you should definitely have this on your list of options.

Just be warned, it might be quieter than you think on a Thursday evening.

The bill came to £49.60.

Blessed are the city cheese-makers

CHEESEMAKERS of Canterbury is officially one of the UK's top cheesemongers.

The Dargate team set up its cheese counter at The Goods Shed, Canterbury, two years ago to promote local cheese-makers and has now been highly recommended in the Best New Cheese Retailer class at the British Cheese Awards 2012.

The awards are the country's primary competition for the industry, attracting more than 900 entries from almost 200 British and Irish cheese-makers.

For more on Cheesemakers of Canterbury, email George Ward on ocheese@thegoodshed.co.uk or visit www.thecheeseweb.com.

Food web shows local produce helps towns

LOCAL food in Faversham supports 410 jobs and generates £9 million in trade.

The Campaign to Protect Rural England reported the impact that local food has on community and countryside in the town.

For the first time the CPRE report From Field To Fork builds a picture of the area's food web and the network of relationships between producers, outlets and consumers.

Thea Platt, of CPRE, said: "This is much more than reducing food miles. The web supports 410 local jobs in farming, production and at outlets, contributing to a turnover of £9 million into the economy."

CHRISTMAS DINING

It seems those balmy days of summer were only a flipped burger on

Why here...

Set deep in the Kent countryside, the boutique hotel and restaurant of Elvey Farm makes a statement... you instantly realise that this is somewhere special. Tucked away on a medieval farmstead, Elvey is made up of a cluster of buildings centred on a beautiful 16th-century barn overlooking sunny hills in the summer months, but it really comes into its own during the winter – and especially on the run-up to Christmas. The log fire crackles away in the bar, the restaurant is decked out in traditional Christmas garb, the frost glistens in the surrounding fields and the smells from the kitchen are too tempting for words.

The team prides itself on attention to detail and this restaurant in the heart of Darling Buds Of May country will have you reminiscing of those oh so classic holiday seasons with their hot, wholesome food and stylish decorations.

The majority of ingredients used in Elvey's original dishes are sourced locally, home-made from scratch and hearty. Why not stay and make a night of it?

On the menu...

Christmas parties for groups of eight or more. Lunchtime, three courses for £15. Evening, three courses for £28. Rooms for £85 in December. Open for lunch from Wednesday to Sunday and every evening. To see the full menus, visit www.elveyfarm.co.uk.

Why here...

The Drum Inn is a 300-year-old building with a fascinating history of military memoirs and smuggler stories that are still told to this day in the pub placed at the heart of Kent. Many of its original features, including two working fireplaces, give the venue an inviting and relaxing atmosphere. The team at the Ashford pub serves award-winning guest ales that are changed regularly as well as traditional, freshly-cooked pub food seven days a week. Look out for the steak-night deals offering a steak meal and large glass of wine for just £14.95. Looking forward to the winter

Partying to the beat of the drum this Christmas time

holiday season, The Drum Inn will be hosting a Guy Fawkes night with traditional bonfire and fireworks.

A hog roast will be available with tickets priced at £5. Family tickets are available. During Christmas time, the menu will offer a range of either traditional Christmas fare, as well as classic roasts and alternative options as well as vegetarian meals.

The official Christmas menu will be available from next week via the pub's website or by phoning the pub directly.

On the menu...

The Drum Inn's day-to-day menu offers traditional food like beer Brie fritters, breaded whitebait, battered cod, 10oz rump steak, home-made steak-and-ale pie, the BBQ chicken melt, seabass or traditional bangers and mash. Prices range from £8.96 to £14 for a main course.

Why here...

The Woolpack Inn at Chilham boasts a warm, welcoming atmosphere, with its oak beams and inglenook fireplaces offering a glimpse into hospitality of yesteryear. A delicious home-cooked menu features ingredients from local producers. Fish comes off the boat in the morning and is on the plate by lunch service – you can't get fresher than that! Simple, honest food is the order of the day at the pub, which offers original dishes. A sample three-course meal could include local mushroom sautéed in garlic butter, finished with Stilton and cream and presented on a garlic ciabatta followed

Why here...

The Waggon at Hale is a well-run family pub with good food, good wines and beers and a very friendly, relaxed atmosphere.

There is always plenty going on at the Waggon, with themed nights, quizzes, charity events and live music. Families are always welcome and in fact in the pub's big family-friendly garden there is even a mini family farm featuring chickens, guinea pigs, rabbits and the star of the show, Crackling the miniature pig.

Proprietor Emma Pearson said: "We do not try to be anything more than what we already are – a warm and friendly country pub serving real food and drink, selected, prepared and served to you by our friendly team."

From November 29 to December 23 the Waggon will be offering its pre-Christmas menu priced at £22.95 per person. That price includes a starter, a main course and a dessert from a excellent range including traditional Christmas pudding, chocolate brownies, tasty French apple tart or, for the ultra-sweet-lovers out there, the raspberry-and-white chocolate cheesecake brûlée.

On the menu...

Choose a starter from the tomato-and-basil soup, the deep-fried Brie, the duck-and-orange pâté or prawn-and-crab salad. For mains, there is traditional roast turkey, roast topside of Scottish beef, mushroom-and-chestnut-stuffed plaice or stuffed red peppers.

Why here...

The Black Horse is nestled nicely in the picturesque village of Monks Horton. This traditional oak-beamed pub and restaurant offers a taste of Kent at its very best. With ample parking and a roaring open fire in the cold winter months, this is a perfect venue for any occasion, whether it be a family meal or a Christmas party. The pub complements its surroundings perfectly, a picture-postcard property that is the epitome of what a country pub should be. It has an extensive beer garden to the rear, which looks out on to countryside, with an enclosed children's play area – an ideal spot for both customers and their children. And the menu is not half bad either! Savour the freshly-prepared dishes with an Italian twist. Light lunches start from £3.50. The Wednesday lunch club offers two courses for £7.50. Or treat yourself to a Sunday roast, carved specially for you at £8.95. There is also personalised catering for all events. For more details about the Christmas party menu and details, phone the pub on 01303 812182.

On the menu...

Examples: tiger prawns sautéed with garlic and chilli butter, or chargrilled chorizo with mixed leaves, mint and cucumber dip, or seared scallops with bacon, mango chutney and salad. Seafood crumble (haddock, prawns and cod) in a thyme-and-garlic sauce.

Why here...

On the village green opposite the church, the black-beamed, white-walled Red Lion could well be the perfect English-postcard image. Located in the picturesque village of Hernhill, the warm, cosy atmosphere at the Lion will make you want to stay all day and all night. And why not? With the traditional log fires, live entertainment and quality home-cooked food, this free house has something for everyone.

There is a safe children's play area in the garden and a sunny front patio, making the pub a desirable location for families, parties and a romantic dinner.

There is a good selection of real ales, wines and beers as well as a good choice of meals on the à la carte menu. The specials change with the seasons and the team has recently launched its Taste of Kent menu in the refurbished restaurant, serving dishes and ingredients sourced within a couple of miles of the pub. Food is served daily Monday to Saturday from midday to 2.30pm and 6pm-9pm. On Sunday it is served from midday to 8pm. Christmas-party-booking is now available.

On the menu...

Examples: slow-roasted lamb shank on the bone with a bed of mashed potatoes and minted peas, or horseshoe gammon steak with chunky chips and simply topped with double egg... or try the extra-mature 28-day-hung sirloin of beef on a bed of home-made wifju fries.

Why here...

The Black Pig at Staple near Canterbury is a fine 16th-century, timbered building that offers a large garden and plenty of free parking. It has a modern comfortable restaurant and bar area with a welcoming atmosphere and brilliant menu. The chefs at the pub provide an extensive range of home-cooked meals using locally-sourced food and this has helped to establish an excellent reputation for dining. The team has become famous for its 'Host your Roast' meals on Sundays at which the chefs cook the food but the customer carves the meat for a minimum of six guests.

Go the whole hog and eat at the Black Pig on the big day

There is a pre-Christmas menu this year running from December 1 to Christmas Eve, offering two courses for £22.50 and three courses from £25.50.

There will also be a Christmas Day lunch sitting this year using the same menu, but guests will have the addition of a glass of fizz and canapés on arrival. Champagne sorbet in between starter and main course and no supplement on the port and Stilton option. The price is £65 per head.

On the menu...

Example: Home-made venison pâté with a redberry coulis or smoked salmon blinis with lime crème fraîche followed by roast turkey, chestnut stuffing, pigs in blankets, bread sauce, roast potatoes and seasonal vegetables finished by Baileys and chocolate cheesecake.

YOUR WEEKEND

Movers and shakers Free dance sessions

Stour Centre, Ashford

Open Thursday afternoons until November 8 01233 625 362
www.contrafusion.co.uk

FREE dance sessions are available at Ashford's Stour Centre throughout the autumn.

Kent County Council is backing the classes, which will be offering community dancing that everyone can do, from 17th-century styles to 21st-century ceilidh; there will be square dances, American contra, barn dances, waltzing and the polka.

The sessions will be run by local teachers John and Karen Sweeney and be available every Thursday afternoon from 2pm-3.30pm until November 8.

John said: "This type of dancing, apart from being great fun, contributes to a healthy lifestyle and helps people of all ages to get and stay fit."

Country star in da house Eve Selis

Maidstone house gigs

Tuesday, October 9
email housegigs@gmail.com
contact organisers for location

To support the UK release of new album Family Tree, American country-singer Eve Selis will be touring the UK, stopping off in Maidstone.

Championed by BBC Radio 2

DJ Bob Harris, Selis has begun to make a name for herself in the UK, having arguably already conquered her native music charts.

As winner of seven San Diego Music Awards in Americana and Adult Alternative, Selis is no stranger to basic live music and will be playing a number of her new tracks at her gigs.

Watch out for Selis's covers of Rubber And Glue, classic country heartbreaker Don't You Feel Lonesome and Leonard Cohen's majestic masterpiece Hallelujah.

The real deals A town's folk celebrated

Deal Maritime & Local History Museum

Saturdays through October 01304 381344

AN EXHIBITION celebrating people and organisations that have had a lasting effect on Deal has opened at the town's maritime museum.

A Hero To Deal, which is open every Saturday until the end of October, shows some of the people who have affected the town's development during the last 300 years.

One of those featured is Thomas Powell, who supported boatmen's attempts to rescue seamen drowning in the Great Storm of 1703.

Thomas Oakley is another in the exhibition after his part in breaking a cartel on the price of flour, which was causing hardship to the town's poor.

Entrance to the exhibition is included in the main ticket price of the museum at £3 for adults and £1.50 for children.

Paralympic pianist plays Lunchtime gig

The Woodville, Gravesend

Thursday, October 4 01474 337774
www.woodville.co.uk

OPENING the new season of The Woodville lunchtime concerts will be Nicholas McCarthy, the one-handed pianist who performed at the closing ceremony of the 2012

Paralympics Games

McCarthy was born in 1989 and only began to play the piano at the late age of 14.

Born without his right hand, he is one of a few left-handed pianists worldwide and has gone on to star in concerts and on TV, playing in front of royalty across the globe.

He studied at the Guildhall School of Music in London under acclaimed concert pianist Lucy Parham.

Most recently, McCarthy was awarded the prestigious international AMI Award for creative excellence in music.

CHRISTMAS PARTIES

It's the coolest guest list of 2012 – be on it!

FOLLOWING the success of last year's Christmas party nights, Winter Wonderland is back at Margate's Winter Gardens, with Queens Hall transformed for yuletide.

On entry you will be greeted with an iced cocktail to kick-start your evening. A pianist will accompany you as you enjoy your three-course festive carvery at the beautifullydecorated tables. Once you have enjoyed your sumptuous meal, it's time for you to be treated to some live entertainment before dancing the night away into the early hours guided by the resident Winter Gardens DJ.

Whether you're a small party of two or a group of 200, we'd love you to join us for a Christmas to remember for just £29.50 per person (smart dress code will be enforced).

So what are you waiting for? Reserve your place now on the coolest guest list in 2012, from Monday, December 17, through to Saturday, December 22.

For bookings and further information, phone Margate Winter Gardens on 01843 296111 or email admin@margatewintergardens.co.uk.

Lord it up this festive period at the manor

EASTWELL Manor is a fabulous winter wonderland setting for a Christmas party, with the historic manor house and The Pavilion beautifully decorated for the festive season with giant Christmas trees and hundreds of lights.

The party nights are held at The Pavilion and have either casino tables or Wii games to entertain you following your three-course dinner. The resident DJ will be playing music to suit all tastes and you will be well looked after from the glass of bubbly on arrival until your departure.

Why not stay the night in one of the delightful mews cottages? If you prefer a quieter celebration, then private dining may be the answer. You can eat in one of the beautiful private dining rooms, where eight to 80 guests can be catered for. The head chef has put together some festive menus.

Phone the reservations team on 01233 213000/213020, email enquiries@eastwellmanor.co.uk or visit www.eastwellmanor.co.uk.

Something for all tastes at a very special venue

THE Best Western Plus Dover Marina Hotel & Spa is a great place to celebrate Christmas.

Located on the seafront and within walking distance of the town square, the hotel is an ideal venue for that special Christmas party, festive lunch or short break.

Christmas party nights include dinner and music from the DJ. For lovers of Indian food, there are Bombay Christmas party nights on Thursdays.

At lunchtimes the hotel offers three-course Christmas Fayre lunches with festive table decorations, while on Thursday each week in December senior citizens dine for just £15.95 each.

Christmas Day lunch sees a special price for children under 12 and there is a visit from Father Christmas. The hotel also offers Christmas Eve dinner, Christmas Day dinner and Boxing Day lunch and dinner.

Special accommodation rates are available. For enquiries and bookings, phone 01304 203633 or email events@dovermarinahotel.co.uk.

Take a magical step back to the world of Dickens

THIS Christmas, Dickens World at Chatham Maritime is proud to present truly magical entertainment for everyone.

Entry to the Christmas launch is free and the festive celebrations commence on Saturday, November 17.

Join in then for a chance to enter the beautifully-decorated attraction and view the live performance of A Christmas

Carol in the Dickens World courtyard, complete with a magnificent indoor snowfall.

Events this Christmas include the family pantomime Dick Whittington, with performances throughout December.

Visit Santa's Winter Wonderland and imagine a special ice-rink for children to play on, the workshop cabins where Santa and Mrs Merry Christmas and the helper elves Jingle, Jangle and Twinkle help all the children with their Christmas lists.

Imagine gingerbread-making and story time with Mrs Merry Christmas in a special place where it's always Christmas.

YOUR WEEKEND

A taste of the cathedral city Eat in the park

Canterbury Food and Drink Festival

Fri to Sun, September 28-30
01227 378100

THE Canterbury Food and Drink Festival returns to Dane John Gardens for 2012, celebrating the city's finest producers and purveyors of drink and craft.

As well as a huge array of tastes and smells, this year's festival features some great entertainment for all the family, including the ever-popular Little Lounge area, which offers activities to keep even the youngest entertained.

New to the festival this year is the Green Hop Beer Tent, which, alongside more than 20 of the county's breweries, will be making its own versions of ale, fusing hops picked only 12 hours previously.

Cheese-lovers should not miss the Kentish Bluebell Cheese this year.

For more information on times and stalls at the festival, visit www.canterbury.co.uk.

Tumbling into the big top Human circus

Jackson's Field, Rochester

Tue to Sun, October 9-14
0844 415 5228
www.netherlandscircus.eu

MEDWAY families are in for a huge treat when one of Europe's biggest circuses comes to town.

The Netherlands National Circus will set up its big top at Jackson's Field as part of its gigantic all-human circus on tour.

The team is a Dutch institution and has been entertaining crowds since 1948 with innovative acts and top-quality human performers.

In 2012 the circus features the Princess of Balance, Desiree, who can fire arrows with her feet, as well as the triple-level aerial daredevils The Flying Aces.

Springboarders the Cretzu Troupe will be joined by the Mambo Jambo Troupe with its human pyramid.

It's the best of British Military wives return

Leeds Castle, near Maidstone

AFTER the huge success of its 2012 summer gig, the Military Wives Choir has agreed to return to Leeds Castle, above, in 2013.

The choir has had an extraordinary year, with its debut single and album hitting the No 1 spot in the UK charts and a series of performances to royalty, dignitaries and celebrities, including a very special one at The Queen's Diamond Jubilee event.

The group will take part in the Best of British classical concert, as it did this year. This will also feature the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra and Central Band of the RAF.

The ticket price is reduced to £32 picnic style and £42 seated until Monday, December 31.

and The Ivy League head to The Woodville with a stream of classic songs ready to be unleashed on the fans.

The 2013 tour marks a special celebration as it will be the last chance to see Tremeloes guitarist Rick Westwood, right, in action as he retires after the tour.

A fact not many will know is that in 1961 Decca Records auditioned two bands to receive a three-year contract; those bands were The Tremeloes and The Beatles. It was The Tremeloes who won the contract.

Bathrooms for the less able

With medical advances and a greater awareness of how to live a healthy life, many people are not only living longer but are also living fuller lives.

The advent of technology such as tablet computers has further revolutionised the way we communicate, shop and even view the world.

Things such as high fashion, foreign products and eclectic objets d'art, which were once the preserve of the rich or well connected, are now available to anyone with broadband. As a result, we expect more and compromise less.

In practical terms, however, an ageing population brings its own challenges. Fortunately, modern bathrooms have come a long way, both in terms of design and functionality – especially when it comes to bathrooms for people with disabilities or reduced mobility.

Instead of being limited to a bathroom that resembles a disabled toilet in a hospital or institution, a whole world of colour, design and practicality is now at your fingertips.

With choice can come the anxiety of selecting the right product, but bathroom specialist Ripples is used to working with occupational therapists to ensure it is able to advise and supply bathroom or shower equipment and furniture that is both attractive and fit for purpose.

Dean Chesterton, director of Ripples Canterbury, outlined some of the products designed to help less abled people create their perfect bathroom. He said: "We meet many clients who are looking to create a bathroom that they can use such as non-slip tiles or hard vinyl, which can help to reduce the hazard of slipping. The majority of floor tiles used in these kinds of bathrooms are textured, but a clear anti-slip coating can be added to flooring if required.

Specially-adapted bathrooms can be quite expensive. However, some customers are able to claim zero VAT on most products, which can mean a saving of 20 per cent per purchase.

Ripples has built up a strong reputation for designing inclusive bathrooms and understands that clients are individual, so the team listens to requirements and always pays attention to detail to deliver a complete personal service designed with only you in mind.

The Canterbury showroom offers a relaxing environment in which to build your bathroom scheme with an expert designer on hand to advise customers.

For information on Ripples, or advice on designing a bathroom, visit www.ripples.ltd.uk or phone 01227 459525 independently without compromising on style. At Ripples our comprehensive ranges will ensure you achieve the best from your home. We have a range of items to help, from easy-access shower enclosures to lower baths, baths with a small seating area inside, wet-room floors with level access and thermostatic showers.

"Other amenities include toilets that are raised by 50mm, which gives better flexibility on the knees, as well as wall-hung basins, which can be fitted lower to suit the requirements of people in wheelchairs, or for those who prefer to sit in front of the basin while washing."

Mr Chesterton also recommends installing solid-chrome grab-bars in the correct place to assist lifting and sitting and that are both sturdy and look good.

"Seats in the shower area, or positioning the shower head lower down, can help people wash their bodies easily without having to get too much water on their head," he said.

Other design adjustments include flooring,

Preparing for winter and keeping warm with Heat Design

2012 had the wettest summer for 100 years but whatever the skies throw at us next a trip to Heat Design is sure to help you keep prepared and - most importantly - warm this winter. With friendly, passionate and independent advice, Heat Design in Canterbury has everything you need to get your family ready for the winter.

From traditional to contemporary styling, Heat Design stock hundreds of different models from leading brands such as Chesney's, Hunter, Euroheat, Barbas, Dovre, Yeoman, Stovax, Rais and Woodwarm. Some larger models can also heat hot water.

If you are considering fireplace

As a way of heating your home, the humble wood stove has come on a long way. Modern models are highly efficient, safe and beautifully designed. Clean air technology allows many wood stoves to be used in a smoke control area while reducing their environmental impact. The efficiency of the burn means lower fuel costs and more heating for your money.

options, we have many on display in our showroom, beautifully handcrafted in stone, marble and solid timber, from brands such as Chesney's, Montpellier Marble and Farmington. If you want to restore a period house to its former glory or create an authentic look for a more modern home you can be confident that you will find what you are looking for; from a simple timeless design to blend in with any decor or select a mantelpiece faithfully reproduced and hand finished for a classic period feel to your room. A surround can be used to create a traditional, classic setting with a wood stove, period inset or an open fire.

Another option is gas. Gas fires provide a centre piece for a room. Push button convenience with contemporary gas fires enables them to be turned on and off, up and down at the touch of a remote control, combining ease of use with great modern flame effects and high efficiency levels.

From the traditional cottage to the ultra chic apartment our huge range of gas fires means that there is one to suit any interior. Our expert staff are on hand to guide you to the right choice and help you through buying and installing a new gas fire. Heat Design also stock a range of the latest gas fuel efficient fires from top brands such as Gazco and Bellfires.

A beautiful cast iron cooker can be a focal point of the kitchen, at the centre of the home. At Heat Design we do everything we can to help you choose the range cooker best suited to you. We stock a selection of range cookers from the best manufacturers including Aga, Rayburn, Steel Cuisine and Big Blue.

The Rayburn allows you to integrate your range cooker into a hot water system and heat your home as well as cook. If you are considering purchasing a Rayburn, they are offering £500 off all their models until October 15th and our in-house Rayburn Guild heating engineer can guide you through installation into existing systems.

Make the most of buy-to-let

PROPERTY across Kent will continue to produce the highest total returns over the next 10 years for buy-to-let investors, according to Rental Britain, a report released by Savills in conjunction with Rightmove, writes Katy Croft.

This year, with a large proportion of prospective purchasers priced out of the buying market, the number of privately-rented homes in Britain has reached 4.8 million – up from just 2.5m in 2002.

A surge in demand from tenants over the past year has seen rental yields increase by an average of 5.2 per cent. Savills is forecasting rents to rise by a further 20 per cent on average over the next five years and, with house prices increasing and mortgage availability still low, it seems there has never been a better time to invest in the buy-to-let market than now.

When considering a buy-to-let property investment, choosing a desirable location is imperative for a number of reasons, not least because a property is defined by its locale.

Good transport links, such as the M2 and M20 and the high-speed rail service, are essential and properties in commuter belts are in high demand, ensuring higher rental yields.

Lucian Cook, director of residential research at Savills, said: "Rental incomes in Kent remain consistently strong. The report shows Sevenoaks currently commands the highest monthly rental income for a two-bedroom apartment in Kent, averaging just under £1,000 per month, with cities like Canterbury offering strong rental yields, too. House-price growth prospects in Kent are also expected to be stronger than the UK as a whole, and towards the top end of the range expected for the South East. That means prospective total returns are likely to be attractive to cash-rich investors."

Investors looking to purchase a buy-to-let property in Sevenoaks have the opportunity to look at Ryewood, a new development launched by award-winning developer Berkley.

Ryewood offers a range of properties, including one- and two-bedroom apartments and two-, three-, four- and five-bedroom houses with contemporary specifications, all set among landscaped gardens. It is next to a Kent Wildlife Trust reserve and just a five-minute car journey from Sevenoaks and a few minutes' walk from Dunton Green train station, from where London is only 29 minutes away.

All the homes at Ryewood have detailing such as chrome switches and sockets, downlighters and flooring included throughout.

The individually-designed, fully-fitted kitchens come with integrated appliances including a hob, cooker, fridge-freezer and dishwasher. Many of the apartments have a private balcony or terrace and all the houses have a garden.

Sevenoaks has a historic high street and a selection of places to dine out, as well as plenty of chic boutiques and country pubs in the surrounding area.

The countryside lies on the doorstep, while golfers have the choice of two prestigious clubs, Wildernesse and Knole Park.

Tina Dedman, sales and marketing director at Berkley Homes, said: "With current research indicating an estimated 'yield' on investment properties now running at an average of 6 per cent across the UK, more than double the amount investors can typically earn on a savings account, current market property prices and lower interest rates make now a great time for landlords to invest in a buy-to-let property."

Apartments at Ryewood are priced from £249,950, while houses are from £314,950.

For further information, you can visit www.ryewood.co.uk or phone 01732 740402.

Which is the best bed? Survey has an answer

A BED from Lenleys furniture supplier, based in Canterbury, has been given high praise from a leading voice in retail.

Members of Which?, the UK's largest consumer body, gave its luxury Vi-Spring bed the highest satisfaction score for a second year running, beating all other mattresses.

The survey gave five stars for both comfort and durability and 85 per cent overall satisfaction.

"We have a laugh with our customers when they try them out because they never want to get up again," said Denis Brophy, who has been buying beds for Lenleys in Roper Road, Canterbury, for eight years.

He said the secret came from Vi-Spring's pioneering pocket-sprung mattress and the fact each bed was individually made by master craftsmen to suit customers' exact requirements.

The mattresses are made from pure British fleece wool, mohair, soft cotton and silk, and the beds come with a range of upholstery fabrics, headboards and divans.

"I can honestly say I'm working on my research day and night," said Mr Brophy.

"I feel very comfortable recommending these beds because I sleep soundly in my own."

LUCY'S PATCH

by LUCY HEWETT

September has been a mixed bag, but I've been making the most of the sunshine as there are a few projects I would like to finish before the colder weather sets in – not that bad weather should stop me doing jobs in the garden, of course.

One of the projects we want to complete is our koi pond area, which we are giving a make-over. We created it about 12 years ago and the surrounding shrubs had all got to big and woody so we have relocated or pulled them out, revealing some lovely, long-forgotten rocks.

I have to admit that I did have some help from my gardener Shaun (The Garden Guy, based in Conyer). He did a lot of the heavy work, including the unenviable task of tackling the bamboo – I had planted this long before I knew anything about invasive plants, but Shaun has managed to dig up all the roots... we hope!

Once all the shrubs were cleared, we put down black plastic (anything to stop extra weeding – my new gardening policy) and planted with some low-level, semi-shade-loving plants, including ferns, hellebores, heucheras, Vinca

UNVEILING TREASURES: Lucy rediscovered some attractive rocks surrounding her 12-year-old pond minor, hostas and then a few larger specimens: a couple of acers, a large grass and a forsythia. Next we are going to cover the plastic with slate chipping, power-hose and repoint all the paths and put up a new fence.

I only bought the plants that I didn't already have elsewhere in my garden, but to save some money I will be dividing some existing plants to fill remaining gaps. Dividing is a great way of creating new plants from old, but if you are not sure about exactly how to do it here are some instructions...

The way to know if your plants needs dividing includes any or both of the following:

- If they are dead in the middle of the clump or have stopped flowering well, with a circle of young growth only around the edges.
- If the clump has outgrown its spot and started invading neighbouring plants, or if the clump has grown itself out of the ground.

1. Cut down the stems as low as possible so they don't get in your way – dig around the clump, then prise it out of the soil.
2. Divide up the healthy young growth either by inserting two forks centrally and prising apart, or use a spade to slice up the clump. I tend to 'mis-shoot' with a spade, so I prefer forks or my hands if it is a tuber-type plant.
3. If replanting straight away, improve the soil by forking in some garden compost or manure and a handful of fertiliser – or pot the new plants up for planting at a later date.

Jobs to do this month

Birds They have been pretty sedentary during the summer but will now start to turn back to the bird-tables and feeders to stock up for the approaching colder months, so start stocking up feeders again – but before you do, give everything a good clean – many birds die each year from parasites and bacteria that can build up in feeders and water-containers.

Lawn care Reseed bare patches during a wet spell and apply autumn lawn-feed – giving it attention now will give the new grass roots a chance to establish before the cold weather sets in. Use a fork to spike lawns to give them aeration. Autumn is a good time to lay a lawn if you have an area you want to turf or seed.

Pots If your summer containers still have some life left in them and are not ready to be replanted with winter flowers yet but could do with a bit of a bolster, plant a few mini mums (baby chrysanthemums) to add colour.

Hopefully you have chosen which ones you want from the massive selection of spring-flowering bulbs, so get planting now for beautiful, much-appreciated displays in the spring.

Also... install a water butt if you have not already done so to collect winter rain.

Give hedges a last trim and tidy-up to keep them neat through winter.

Take advantage of dry weather by painting fences, sheds and other wooden features with a preservative.

Collect leaves as they fall and add to the compost bin – water and leave for a year to make excellent leaf mould.

In the fruit and veg patch

Pick all remaining tomatoes, placing green ones in a paper bag with a few red ones to speed up

AUTUMN GARDEN: Pumpkins have done well this year. Lucy has planted ferns and heucheras among the other greenery by her remodelled pond the ripening process, or make some green tomato chutney.

As you clear and dig over veg beds, consider planting some green manure, eg Phacelia. Green manures are useful as they mean you do not need to weed the bed and they protect the soil from erosion over winter, reducing any leaching of mineral and nutrients and also protecting soil structure; they also boost nutrients when they are dug into the soil in spring.

Once you cut down your bean and pea plants, leave the roots to be dug into the soil as they provide extra nitrogen for future crops.

As temperatures fall, greenhouse-shading paint should be removed and any blinds lifted to allow in as much of the remaining light as possible. Cloche any tender herbs or salad.

Remember to make a note of what you planted where so you do not plant the same things in the same place again next year.

Sow... broad beans for early crops next May and June and sweet peas if you have not already done so.

Harvest Continue harvesting squashes and pumpkins and store for winter use.

My veg patch has been disappointing this year – things just didn't seem to get going, or they have been three weeks later than usual, which had some advantages as I was back from holiday in time to enjoy the benefits of some crops.

So I am still reaping the rewards of the ever-faithful runner beans, cucumbers (Burpless Tasty) and courgettes. At least I can always rustle up a meal of some sort from that lot – a veg-patch omelette is always a favourite.

Pumpkins have done amazingly well this year – I've never had such big ones. Roll on Halloween... we're going to have some amazing carvings.

www.folkestonebookfest.com

FORMER Prime Minister Sir John Major has been announced as the lead name at this year's Folkestone Book Festival.

The politician and author brings his new book My Old Man: A Personal History of Music Hall to the festival on Friday, November 9, at the Saga Pavilion.

Other writers making the trip to the event include Richard And Judy television presenter Judy Finnegan, broadcast personality Pam Ayres and historian Robert Skidelsky.

Also talking will be photographer Mary McCartney, daughter of Beatles frontman Paul McCartney and his late wife Linda.

See online for dates and locations of talks.

A noble cause Comedy Ross eyes up Wells

Assembly Hall Theatre, Tunbridge Wells
Thu and Fri, October 1-2
01892 530613

AFTER a two-year break, Geordie comic Ross Noble is back doing what he does best with a new live tour.

Famed for his fluid, freewheeling style of stringing anecdotes together like one long sentence, Noble creates comedy gold from fragments of random nonsense.

The wild-haired funny-man is one of the top comedians on the British circuit, as he has been for the last 10 years, but he continues to shun stadium venues for more intimate settings.

This is your chance to see the acclaimed stand-up close and personal in his new show Mindblender.

Tickets are priced at £25 and available from www.assemblyhalltheatre.co.uk.

A HOST of garage legends is heading to Whitstable in the run-up to Christmas.

The Brewery Bar presents its UK Garage Series, with DJ Pied Piper, known for the song Do You Really Like It?, starting things off on Saturday, October 20. On Saturday, November 24, DJ Luck and MC Neat take to the decks with their hit Little Bit Of Luck.

Shortly before Christmas, on Saturday, December 15, arguably the biggest stars of the series head to the seaside venue when Oxide and Neutrino arrive, famous for being part of the So Solid Crew and a series of huge hits including No Good For Me.

On Saturday, January 26, The Artful Dodger is sure to feature his No 1 hit Re-rewind.

Tickets will be available on the bar's Facebook group.

See dancing royalty Anton Du Beke

Wednesday, January 23, at 7.30pm
01227 787787
www.marlowetheatre.com

The new show Anton & Erin Go to Hollywood will see the king and queen of the ballroom head to The Marlowe in Canterbury in January.

The UK's favourite dance duo pay tribute to the golden years of the film musicals.

Sassy tunes, sensational choreography and sparkling costumes conjure up all the fizz and razzmatazz of glamorous Hollywood, presented by Anton and Erin with their trademark charm, wit and ballroom magic.

The dancing isn't bad, either!

HOMES

Combination of factors sees asking prices slump again

HOMEOWNERS putting their property on the market in recent weeks dropped their average asking prices for the third consecutive month: down by 0.6 per cent (-£1,402) on the month and 4.6 per cent (-£11,377) on the quarter.

The latest survey from Rightmove shows the average price of a property coming to market this September is virtually unchanged on a year ago at £234,858 (+0.7 per cent).

Prices this month were also unchanged from five years ago at £235,176 – down just 0.1 per cent.

The figures show the huge impact the recession has had on the market as, in contrast, average asking prices in the previous five years from September 2002 to September 2007 saw a 55 per cent rise.

Rightmove said homeowners in the south, including Kent, cash-rich buyers and buy-to-let investors had been the property winners over the past five years, while those who have suffered included trapped renters, mortgage prisoners, downturned down-traders, and sellers in the north.

Miles Shipside, housing market analyst at Rightmove, said: "Summer sellers have had some stiff competition, not only from competing sellers chopping their prices but also from the Olympics extravaganza, which has been more compelling for many than viewing property.

"Property coming to market is £11,000 cheaper than it was three months ago and there will be many hoping this gives a boost to the autumn selling season if buyers leave their starting blocks in a hurry and join the traditional rush to see in the festive season in a new home."

Kent house prices remained stable and held their value, with factors such as the high-speed rail link making them the county attractive to London workers looking to move into larger premises for the same price as a home in the capital.

Kentish company recognised as the UK's top homebuilder

UNITED! Nick Stonley, managing director of United House, clutches the award; he is with colleagues and TV presenter George Clarke, right SWANLEY company United House has won Homebuilder of the Year, the top accolade in the Sunday Times British Homes Awards.

The company also won Apartment Building of the Year and Housing Project of the Year.

The specialist developer, contractor and investor was chosen for its commitment to sustainable regeneration, the establishment of new communities, strong architectural design and landscaping, innovative construction methods and build quality, plus environmental initiatives.

Jeffrey Adams, group chief executive of United House, said: "We have had a record year for awards and beaten some of the leading names in the industry."

"We have a highly-talented and dedicated team at United House who take a bespoke approach to external design and interior specification."

"Outstanding architecture, meticulous attention to detail, our highly-skilled in-house construction team and a real environmental agenda make our developments stand out from the crowd."

FORD has secured a double launch for its Focus ST performance flagship.

Having arrived in showrooms last month, it has now taken a second bow with a starring role in the current blockbuster film The Sweeney.

Billed as a tribute to the legendary 1970s TV series following the escapades of hard-nut Flying Squad detectives Jack Regan and George Carter, the film upholds a tradition of using Fords in those shows.

Prime-time TV audiences saw a succession of Ford Granadas, Consuls and Cortinas roaring around London streets, and film-goers will now see the modern-day Regan (Ray Winstone) and George Carter (Ben Drew aka Plan B) update the thrills and spills in a black Focus ST.

That the ST can walk the talk here is not in doubt: the basic Focus chassis is one of the best in the class for handling and has been tweaked further for the ST, while power comes through a 2.0-litre 250PS EcoBoost engine offering 0-62mph acceleration in 6.5 seconds – it won't stretch credibility if the onscreen villains do fail to make a clean getaway.

Apart from black, the ST is available in five other colours, including Tangerine Scream and Spirit Blue, and priced from £21,995 in five-door format – as used in the film – with a stylish ST estate selling from £23,095.

Official combined fuel consumption is a whisker under 40mpg and standard spec includes body kit, alloys and the usual toys, though you must trade up to ST-2 trim (from £23,495) to get part leather upholstery, and flagship ST-3 (£25,495) to get full leather.

There is no mention yet of whether you will ever be able to buy the ST, or indeed any Focus in an eye-catching three-door format like its arch-rival, the Vauxhall Astra (see our Astra VXR review later in this section).

Despite that decision, though, the Focus remains a top-five seller in the UK, and the model – in all its forms across various national markets – is currently the world's best-selling car.

According to data from IHS Automotive, the Ford Focus sold 489,616 units in the first half of 2012. The nearest competitor, Toyota Corolla, sold 462,187.

The Ford Focus first appeared in Europe in 1998, won the 1999 European Car of the Year award and was very much targeted at this region of the world.

Ford's ambition has grown since and the current, third-generation, Focus launched last year was designed as a 'world car' to rival the likes of the Corolla.

The UK range starts at £13,995 for the five-door. However, the estate sells as more of a premium product from £17,300 even though, surprisingly, Ford has not chosen to give it an upmarket label like rivals, which wear names like sportswagon or sports tourer.

Ford relives Sweeney legend

QUICK OFF THE MARK:
Ford's new Focus ST has had the ideal start to its launch, taking a starring role in the movie The Sweeney, where it can be seen flying around the screen driven by actor Ray Winstone.

DON'T LIKE

NOT SURE

REALLY LIKE

... the fact that a sporty three-door Focus body is not (yet?) offered. This lack could hurt ST sales more than those for Focus 'cooking' versions.

... the basic ST is generous enough yet, but Ford is a past master at judging the market, so expect more goodies added later to sustain demand.

... the ST's balance of practicality plus power. It won't matter too much to Regan and Carter, but flexibility does count with most family users.

Vauxhall tames The Beast – a bit

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

LIKE Dr Frankenstein, Vauxhall unleashed a monster with its first attempt to create a VXR performance flagship for the Astra.

With a turbocharged 240PS (236bhp) engine under the bonnet, applying all that power via the front wheels was always going to be a struggle. Sure enough, the VXR's steering wheel bucked in your hands even with judicious throttle use. The ride was rock hard, too.

I couldn't help but draw the Frankenstein parallel at the time and call it 'The Beast', and I feared the Vauxhall freak-lab had incubated another when I heard the next-generation Astra VXR would have even more horsepower – housing an awesome 280PS (275bhp) to make it the most powerful car in its class.

You can see the potential PR pitfall, had Vauxhall 'bottled it' and settled for less power, but it seemed a risky course to boost the bhp further, especially as the original VXR seemed to spark a rethink at Vauxhall about the VXR sub-brand.

This was that VXR must have performance power and handling but not so that driver and passengers suffer all the time.

So the current Insignia and Corsa VXR's are quite useable everyday cars with the capability to do much more when opportunity arises – in short, the Rottweiler trots at heel until the driver unleashes it.

Following the same philosophy, at least to some extent, the new Astra VXR is tipped to become Vauxhall's best-selling VXR variant.

True, it does have an extra dollop of power compared with its (2005-10) predecessor, but Vauxhall has fitted a limited slip differential this time to enable the Astra to apply as much power as possible without hopping from one front wheel to the other, causing the dreaded 'torque steer' for which the old car was infamous.

It's not a complete cure, but the torque steer is milder and very much at extremes of power

VAUXHALL ASTRA VXR: PRICE £26,995

THE BEAST:

Tamed enough to allow a more comfortable drive, the new Astra VXR is still something of a monster when it comes to power output in a straight line. Cornering is an enthusiast's delight, though, with the VXR wanting to oversteer or step out – predictably, mind you – like a rear-wheel-drive car rather than run wide as a front-wheel-drive set-up should.

I'm sure it's great fun on a track as you can also fiddle with the tautness of the suspension by selecting Sport mode or the extreme VXR setting.

But this new Astra is as much about looks as performance, definitely making the most of the stunning three-door Astra GTC design from Vauxhall/Opel's British design guru Mark Adams and his team.

Sitting on huge 19- or 20-inch alloys, wearing a smart yet discreet body kit and kicked-up rear spoiler, the VXR looks the part and the cabin is sharp, too, with bespoke VXR sports seats and quality interior.

Real-world eco star

BMW'S 320d Efficient Dynamics Auto is What Car?'s Green Car of the Year 2012.

What Car? editor-in-chief Chas Hallett said it was "a remarkable car that delivers 56mpg in the real world, while company car users will be taxed on its low emissions of just 110g/km of CO<sub>2</sub>. BMW has created a car that delivers great environmental credentials without compromise."

Sharper line from Toyota

TOYOTA is using the Paris Motor Show as a showcase for a much-needed change of style, highlighted by a sharp new front-end treatment.

The standard-bearers are rakish new versions of the Auris and Auris Touring Sports (estate) to be built in the UK and contest the family hatchback sector and of the Verso seven-seat midi-MPV, pictured.

Three doors go into the i30

HYUNDAI has surprised the family-hatchback market with a new three-door version of its second-generation i30, joining the five-door and estate models.

The ambitious Korean marque did not use this format during the life of the previous car but clearly feels it needs a sportier option, though it is not expected to take more than 10 per cent of i30 sales.

Big Merc powerhouse leaves past behind

By Steve Loader
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

I'll be honest – I thought the original Mercedes-Benz M-Class a bit of a joke.

Seemingly thrown together at a factory built specially in the US to service the most obvious and irresponsible car market for gas-guzzling 4x4s, it was expensive and cumbersome.

Nevertheless, M-B claims the M-Class has become the world's favourite luxury SUV and the third-generation car, launched earlier this year, has made me eat my words: it's far better-screwed-together, better looking and, while I can't imagine they care much about this in America, the mainstay models for the UK are very fuel-efficient.

Furthermore, I can even forgive the big, bad thirsty V8 AMG version some of its non-PC excesses since it's a truly great drive, physically and aurally. Up to now, the Range Rover Sport, Porsche Cayenne and BMW X5 have had the sporty luxury SUV segment to themselves – we'll discount the plain silly BMW X6 'SUV Coupe'.

But M-B has created a superb chassis for the latest M while retaining much of the previous cars' off-road ability – it's a combination of skills the Porsche and BMW rivals cannot match.

The flagship V8 petrol ML63 AMG is a mean-looking star. With almost 5.5 litres offering 525bhp, plus four-wheel-drive to apply that power, the car is a cultured beast – though it will howl like an old-fashioned muscle car if you kick the throttle.

The rolling M-Class gait of the past is gone, yet M-B engineers have not destroyed the ride quality to deliver a rewarding drive, this being a

MERCEDES-BENZ ML63 AMG: PRICE £82,995

SMOOTH OPERATOR: Mercedes claims its M-Class is now the world's favourite luxury SUV and the third-generation model, above, certainly catches the eye mantra the German marque has adopted more and more lately, paying particular dividends with the current C-Class in its sales battle against the BMW 3 Series.

Of course, the ML63 AMG isn't cheap; prices start at £82,995, almost double the more environmentally-friendly diesel entry model, the ML 250 Bluetec (£43,235). It groans with kit, though, and all the trappings of M-B's AMG styling house – alloys, body kit and AMG trims and badges – but you can still spec it up further and the test car weighed in at almost £105,000.

If you can afford that, though, you won't mind the fuel bills: you'll be lucky to average 20mpg, though the official combined cycle is 23.9mpg, and the first year's road tax is a whopping £1,030.

The fact is, it is a brilliant but expensive toy, a halo car for the two low-emission diesel variants – the other one being the ML 350 Bluetec (£46,335) – and proof that the M-Class has put the past a long way behind it.
